'Stand for Old Glory'

Vietnam veteran reflects on war experience, the meaning of the U.S. flag

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

The most important thing I did during the service was to stand for Old Glory," said Bill Oerly, a Vietnam veteran and current commander of VFW post 4551. "It was a time when people were throwing rocks instead of standing up for our flag and what it means."

Oerly flew reconnaissance for the U.S. Air Force in Vietnam in 1963-64. "We were in charge of air surveillance—we took pictures of the movement and passed them on to the army and marines," he said.

"This was before the build up. There were only about 20,000 G.I.s stationed there at the time."

Oerly didn't come straight back to the United States from Vietnam. During his six years of service, he was also stationed at the Misawa Air Base in Japan, mapped the demilitarized zone in Korea and flew over the mainland of China before President Richard Nixon had opened relations with China.

"The most shocking thing I learned during that time was that our country puts out propaganda just like all of the other countries—only maybe we're a little slicker. They (the government) were trying to make it look like it wasn't as bad as it was, and that was before it got all drug out. The war we could have won, but with the politics we didn't stand a chance."

Oerly was not a ground combat fighter, but he still suffered loss.

"Two of my buddies are MIAs. They were shot down on Dec. 6, 1963. We know they are alive, but they didn't come back. We pulled out of Saigon so quickly. The Viet Cong wouldn't spare your life."

Oerly said he didn't experience some of the hardships other Vietnam veterans did upon return to the United States in part because he did not come straight home and because he was home before things really escalated.

"You can always tell the Vietnam vets. They were looked on as if they hadn't done their job because they didn't win. It wasn't the G.I.s though," he said. "It was the politics."

Ceremony commemorates Memorial Day at VFW post

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Cub and Tiger Scouts posted the flags opening the Memorial Day ceremony held at the Antioch Veterans of Foreign War (VFW) Post 4551.

"It's important for the scouts to learn about the traditions and handling flags," said Bill Oerly, post commander.

Oerly gave credit to the American Legion for its efforts. "The American Legion puts the flags out in the cemetery so that our veterans can be remembered."

Heartfelt prayers were said during the ceremony. "They fought for us and they fell," said Bernie DeDries, of both the VFW and the American Legion.

The Ladies Auxiliary presented a wreath—the emblem of eternity.

Three Cub Scouts came forward and each read a verse of John McCrae's poem "In Flanders Fields."

"In Flanders Fields the poppies blow, between the crosses, row on row, that mark our place; and in the sky. The larks, still bravely singing, fly scarce heard amid the guns below."

"We are the Dead. Short days ago. We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow. Loved, and were loved, and now we lie in Flanders fields."

"Take up our quarrel with the foe: To you from failing hands we throw The torch, be yours to hold it high. If ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep, though poppies grow

Village could face lawsuit

*Resident hires attorney to fight
Neumann Homes development*

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Attorney Newton Finn, whose services have been retained by residents Dale and Marian Brandt, read objections into the record at the Plan Commission meeting that laid the foundation for a potential lawsuit against the Village of Antioch.

In addition to objections that the Neumann Homes development would adversely impact nearby property and have a negative impact to a sensitive environment, Finn contends that the 1992 settlement under which the village must support the development of the Anest property was dismissed and not actually settled.

After the meeting, Finn expanded on his opposition. He said, "The village and Anest cut a private agreement that allowed for 1,330 units, including townhomes, attached and detached residences when he (Anest) had filed for de-annexation from Antioch. They (the village and Anest) went to the judge saying they had reached an accord. The judge then dismissed the de-annexation noting an agreement had been met. No evidence was presented and there were no legal findings."

Finn continued, "What the village did in negotiating with Anest was set up a PUD, which is a tailor-made plan for future development. There are many steps that must be followed under Antioch ordinance to do this. Antioch has exceeded its lawful powers in not following its own ordinance."

Finn noted that it was important to get everything on the table early so that he, on behalf of his clients, doesn't waive the right to bring these issues up later.

Dale Brandt commented, "What stands out to me is that the citizens of Antioch have been lied to for years. They (the village) told us it was a directive settlement, which it was not. This whole thing is against public

Plan Commission rejects Neumann Homes revised plan

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

No discussion was needed after Plan Commission Board member Nancy Binder summarized a lengthy list of concerns spurring her to make a motion for the combined Plan Commission and Zoning Board to deny the petition set forth by Neumann Homes. The motion was unanimously passed with the exception of absent board member Don Zeman.

The recommendation to deny the Neumann Homes plan will be sent to the board of directors of the Village of Antioch at its regular meeting June 5.

In spite of the presentation made by Ken Neumann of Neumann Homes to the Plan Commission in which he outlined 15 changes and eight clarifications, Binder said she was not optimistic about the project.

Binder stated, "Every agency that the public hires to ensure that the environment is protected has stated so many negative comments about this design. IDNR (Illinois Department of Natural Resources) has said, among other things, that the plan demonstrates little sensitivity to the geology and hydrology of the wetland areas. Soil and Water Conservation report points out that 68 percent of the site is hydric or high erodible soils. They also state that they believe there will be damage to the ADID wetlands."

Neumann said that one of the changes would be to nestle home sites within some of the trees thus preserving the vast majority of the oaks, and that these areas would not be mass graded. He added that some of the pines would be cut down, but with the trees Neumann Homes will plant, there will be more trees overall.

Nonetheless, Binder stated, "The Army Corps of Engineers raised serious concerns regarding the overall loss of overall habitat value from the clearing of oak groves and the evergreen forest."

Neumann contended that sensitive areas will be enhanced and more protected as the developer puts in buffers. He noted the land is currently being farmed all the way up to the edges of the wetlands.

Binder countered that claim with the statement, "The Army Corp also states that a development of this magnitude poses a serious threat to the natural hydrology on site and the wetlands Antioch Bog, Deer Lake and Red Wing Slough."

Other changes Neumann discussed were to move the entrance at Rte. 173 slightly to the west. He said the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) approved the new entrance. To handle traffic, Neumann said the developers would pay $40 per house for a traffic light, but could not guarantee that the state would install the light as common practice is traffic first, traffic light second.

Binder still had objections to the entrance at Rte. 173 and said, "I am opposed to an entrance on Rte. 173. If it were eliminated, there would be less damage to the wetland up there, and there would be better traffic flow on Rte. 173."

Neumann had said the most sensitive areas of the property would

Pankauskas pleads guilty to criminal sexual abuse

Relationship with Lake Villa 16-year-old resulted charges

BY BECKY DUBA
Staff Reporter

Ann Pankauskas, 22, of Antioch, pleaded guilty to aggravated criminal sexual abuse of a 16-year-old boy from Lake Villa.

Criminal sexual abuse is a Class Two felony that involves an act of sexual arousal of the defendant between two individuals having an age difference of at least five years. When the term aggravated is used in accompaniment, this means that a weapon or a threat of a weapon was used.

Pankauskas was originally charged with three counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault, a Class X felony that involves actual penetration and the use of a dangerous weapon of some sort.

Court officials reported the two met at the county juvenile justice center in Vernon Hills where Pankauskas worked as a clerk. Assistant State's Attorney Claudia Kasten confirmed the pair began a relationship of the boyfriend-girlfriend kind thereafter.

An investigation resulted in Pankauskas' termination and arrest.

Because of Pankauskas' plea of guilty, the three charges of aggravated criminal sexual assault were dropped and she may receive no more than four years probation and 30 months in a work release program with the county jail. However, according to Kasten, this is still pending on the sentencing done by the judge.

Kasten would not go further into the situation. "I have to wait until after the sentencing before I can really say anything," she noted.

Pankauskas will be sentenced June 28 by Judge Victoria Rossetti. She is currently free on a signature bond.

Fund-raiser June 4 to assist accident victim

Co-workers and friends are joining their efforts to assist a victim of a motorcycle accident.

Marybeth Banks was renewing an interest in riding motorcycles when she took a spill in between Lake Geneva and Burlington, Wis. on April 2.

A fund-raising event will be held June 4, noon-7 p.m. at Bobby's Bowl Inn, located on Gilmer Rd. in Volo.

"She was out practicing on her Harley when the gravel gave out and she lost control. She suffered very serious head trauma. She suffered injuries to her ribs, her leg was broken in two places, elbow, knee and eye injury," said Michelle Petersen of Bobby's Bowl Inn.

She is now out of the hospital and moves around with a walker. Banks' woes include lack of insurance to pay for needed medical treatment.

For more information, call 815-385-8811 or 815-344-6231. Bobby's Bowl Inn is located at 35009 N. Gilmer, Volo.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Kudos to Plan Commission, residents should attend board meeting

I would like to thank the Plan Commission, and especially Nancy Binder, on the fine job it did on its research and decision to deny the petition to develop the Neumann Home project of 1,390 homes and condominiums.

On Monday, June 5, this petition will be on the agenda for the village board's vote. For those that are concerned about the impact this type of development will place on our schools, traffic congestion, public safety, churches, sporting activities, and the general impact it will make on our wetlands, wildlife, trees and some rare forms of plant growth, you need to come to the board meeting on June 5.

This will affect all residents of the area, including Lake Villa and Lindenhurst.

Rescue Squad members deserve respect

As a past long time member of both the Antioch Fire Department as well as the Antioch Rescue Squad, I was appalled to read a letter that I received in the mail today. I would love to find out why this person or persons don't have the integrity to sign their name to such an interesting letter that attempts to defame the Antioch Rescue Squad.

Currently, to become a member of the Rescue Squad, you must obtain an Illinois certified EMT-B License that requires a person to attend classes at a local hospital three nights a week, four hours each night for a period of three months. This totals up to 120 hours of classroom time plus the required time working with patients in the hospital's emergency room. After the EMT-B class you could take the EMT-P class that would require yet another class. This class consists of two nights each week, three hours each night, for a period of eight months. That means another 350 hours of training in the classroom and more emergency room training.

There are also a certain amount of calls that must be performed on actual live rescue calls within the field before becoming a state certified paramedic. On top of all of the classroom training, there would be time needed to study for your tests and quizzes. After obtaining your certifications, there are on-going continuing education classes that each member must take monthly just to retain those certifications.

These dedicated people leave their families and friends at all hours of the day to help you, the people of this community. They do this without regard to what is happening in their lives at the time of your emergency medical needs. These dedicated people leave their families during holidays, special events, and during their time of rest. They do this, without any type of pay, as you sit in the comfort of your home spending time with your family. The members also have assigned duty nights to cover emergency calls for a specified amount of time each week, as well as have an entire 24-hour period to answer calls one weekend per month. The members of the Antioch Rescue Squad are doing this for the betterment of the community and are there for the right reasons.

I admit that there is no organization that is without flaw or could not be improved. But as for you, who wrote this letter that defames the Rescue Squad and accuses them of insurance fraud, I have no respect for you! If you have so much of a problem with the way Rescue Squad is being run, you should come over and fill out an application for membership. Become a member, and be part of the solution, to make it a better organization than what it already is. I would hope that in the future you would have enough of a spine to sign your name to any further letters.

Septic system problem-solving forum to be held

A potential septic solution for residents of unincorporated Antioch will be discussed at St. Stephen Church at Rte. 59 and Hillside Ave. on June 8 at 8 p.m.

The forum is sponsored by the Lake County Health Dept./Community Health Center and the United Homeowners Association of Unincorporated Antioch (UHAUA).

The forum is entitled "Managing onsite wastewater systems as a public utility" and will address the potential of instituting a comprehensive management plan for decentralized wastewater systems as an alternative to, or in combination with, sanitary sewer extension.

Under the comprehensive management plan, onsite wastewater systems would be evaluated, upgraded, replaced and or relocated as appropriate, a public utility would own and manage the system, and the homeowners' responsibility would be limited to payment of a monthly bill.

The forum's speakers will include Dr. Robert Rubin of North Carolina State University. He is an expert in onsite system technologies and will discuss his views of onsite system management models and his current work as a visiting scientist with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to develop national standards for managing onsite systems. He is familiar with the challenges Antioch's small lots and marginal soils pose to wastewater treatment.

Additional speakers include Doug Ebelherr, manager of the Illinois Department of Public Health Private Sewage Disposal Program in Springfield; Paul Chase, president of Chase Environmental Services; and Anthony Smithson, manager of the Lake County Health Department's Individual Sewage Disposal Program.

The forum is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Anthony Smithson at 360-6758.

Harley plunges in at dog challenge

Harley, a local yellow Labrador Retriever, took the plunge at Ralston-Purina's Incredible Dog Challenge held in Grant Park.

Harley's owner, Mary Christensen, said, "My husband Brian saw a television notice about the competition which stated that there were two slots open for the general public. We knew Harley had to go."

The competition included many events including the high jump, flying disc and terrier races. Harley's area of expertise is the dog diving competition.

Christensen said, "We had just one day notice to go downtown to try for the spot. The first 11 people to sign up downtown could compete for these two slots. We got one of them."

Christensen said Harley learned to dive from being around the water all of his life. "We used to throw a duck decoy in the water for him when he was a pup and he'd take off after it. We had to travel to the forest preserve then, but now we live on the water."

Eleven dogs total competed in the diving dog division from around the area. The dogs were permitted three jumps each with the best of the three jumps being taken as the score.

OUR TOWN

Julie Murphy

Christensen said the competition is similar to the long jump in a track and field event. "The dogs are judged on the distance they dive only. They take a running start down the platform and dive in," said Christensen.

Harley's best jump was 18 feet 6 inches which wasn't enough to place in contention to go to nationals. Christensen said the winning dog jumped over 20 feet, and the winner of last year's nationals jumped more than 22 feet.

"The competition was done for fun, but the winners did come away with medals," said Christensen.

OLD GLORY

They were beat down until they hurt so bad that they just withdrew. It was 10 years later when their efforts were finally recognized, but that doesn't right all the wrongs or erase what they were left feeling for those 10 years."

Oerly said if there is one thing that needs to be told about the war it is a little truth. "We were there to stop communism. It was important to the people who fought for it, whether you call it a war or a conflict. Kids today aren't taught too much about the war. It's considered too new for history books, and the way they rewrite some of these books—they devote maybe a paragraph to the war and two pages to something like Jane Fonda."

As commander of VFW Post 4551 in Antioch, Oerly oversees everything and coordinates with the village and the surrounding communities. "Some of the community programs we (VFW) are involved with are hosting blood drives, offering bicycle safety classes at the schools and doing the flag raising for various events."

The work and services Oerly holds most dear are those dealing with the flag.

"People can bring in flags that have been torn or soiled. I've been saving them so that we can teach girl scouts and boy scouts how to dispose of them properly. Some people don't know that you don't just throw a flag away. Retired flags must be burned a certain way."

Oerly can help organizations exchange flags that should be retired for new. "I was able to get a flag that flew over the nation's capitol. We will be donating it to the Antioch Police Department for their new building."

Oerly said the VFW needs new members and younger members, including veterans from the Gulf War. Floyd Horton, a World War I veteran and Illinois' oldest vet, died last year at 106 years old. Oerly said the post has lost 11 or 12 members since Horton's death, and that approximately 3,000 World War II veterans die each month, nationally.

"We all fought for the same flag, and it still stands for the same thing—a free country," Oerly concluded.

be developed first, as they are the areas that include the entrance to the development.

Binder expressed her disapproval. "The current phasing is inappropriate. Some of the greatest damage to the sensitive areas will be done in the first phase. I realize some of this may change based upon knowing where the detention is now. It is obvious that the petitioner either doesn't understand or doesn't care about how important the wetlands or erosion control are by suggesting that erosion control can be done by a silt fencing," she said.

Binder's conclusion prior to her motion to deny the petition by Neumann Homes stated, "There has been a general disregard for the process here at the Village of Antioch."

Guest speaker, Mayor Marilyn Shineflug said, "Because of your strength and courage, we all live in freedom."

Oerly read "I am your flag" and

"The flag speaks" as a reminder of the honor of the national symbol and the importance of defending it.

policy at best and illegal at worst. All of this happened under the covers."

Finn concluded, "The village is not locked in because the settlement is illegal. If the village board rejects the plan commission recommendation, then we will go ahead with a lawsuit."

Mayor Marilyn Shineflug was unable to attend the meeting as she was at a solid waste advisory meeting. She said, "I am at a disadvantage because I wasn't there to hear his (Finn) full comment. To my knowledge, the village has not received anything in writing."

Group effort builds band shell

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

The William E. Brook Entertainment Center is being built as a cooperative effort of largely donated funds, materials, and labor.

Claude LeMere, community development director, said, "People have just opened their hearts to us."

He reported that Marshall Brothers Roofing sent eight people from three crews to shingle the roof. Bradco Supply Corporation donated the shingles.

The inaugural celebration concert is slated for Aug. 5, but LeMere said the amount of rain has prevented getting the heavy machines in and around the band shell, and this date may have to be moved back.

"We will have 800 amp service for the building. Our transformer is the same size as it would be for an industrial building," reported LeMere. "Turo Electric has donated a large part of the mechanical equipment and has sent crews over to the building's electric."

The Janet Brook family donated $120,000 for the sound system. JAC Masonry provided labor at no cost. Thelen Sand and Gravel donated concrete. Swederski Concrete Construction has donated $10,000 of labor and materials and will put in the floor when the time comes.

"Eckert Construction donated all of the wood and put the roof on for us," said LeMere. Colette Plumbing Company installed the plumbing for the bathroom.

JDA Painting is donating all the painting and staining of the wood. Murphy Excavating is donating the black dirt and doing the final grading. Fox Trucking did the excavation for the foundation.

Hoban Construction and John Horan have done the carpentry and installed the fascia.

Several companies have helped with all of the electrical work required for the sound system including Voling Electric, Leo Electric, Golden Electric and L.A. Sound.

LeMere continued, "Diemer Plumbing and Excavating built the hill for seating. The backside of that hill is the sledding hill. Commonwealth Edison donated the poles for the power lines and the labor to install them."

Ryland Homes and Deer Crest Developing donated the laminated arches.

DUI

Nicholas R. Dorogi, 20, of 25605 W. Rte. 173 in Antioch, was arrested on May 25 at 11:35 p.m. for driving under the influence of alcohol.

Police saw a red Ford Mustang entering the intersection of Rte. 59 and Rte. 173 with wheels squealing and taking off at a high rate of speed. As the vehicle neared Tiffany Rd., the driver began to weave back and forth crossing the center line, police report. Dorogi was pulled over. The officer could smell the strong odor of alcoholic beverage. Dorogi was asked to exit the vehicle to perform a sobriety test.

Dorogi was arrested and transported to the Antioch Police Dept. There he agreed to a breath test resulting in .21 blood alcohol content. Citations were issued for improper lane use and driving with blood alcohol content of .08 or more. He was released on $100 cash bond pending his June 20 court date at 9 a.m. in Waukegan.

Edward Gonzales, 43, of 3800 N. Paulina in Chicago, was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol on May 22 at 11:52 p.m.

Radar clocked his vehicle traveling east bound on Rte. 173 at 50 mph in a posted 40 mph zone.

He was pulled over and informed of the reason for the stop. Gonzales' speech was slurred. Police ran identifiers through LEADS/NCIC and came back with him suspended.

His court date is set for July 12 at 9 a.m. in Waukegan.

Suspended driver's license

Thomas D. Lukich, 30, of 29 Poplar in Fox Lake, was arrested for driving with a suspended driver's license on May 22 at 1:27 a.m. Lukich was observed traveling south bound on Rte. 83 at Beach Grove Rd. Police had prior knowledge that the owner/driver was suspended. Police stopped Lukich and advised him of the stop. Lukich stated that he had neither driver's license nor insurance. Police ran his identifiers through LEADS/NCIC and came back with a suspended driver's license.

Lukich was placed under arrest and transported to the Antioch Police Department. There he was put through booking procedures and issued citations for driving while suspended and operating uninsured vehicle. He was released on personal recognizance bond pending his June 28 court date at 10:30 a.m. at Branch III in Grayslake.

LAKE VILLA

DUI

Jason Scott Singer, 24, of 229 E. Wildwood Dr. in Round Lake Beach, was stopped by Lake Villa Police at 3:03 a.m. on May 26 at Rte. 83 and Cedar, where he was driving 40 mph in a 20 mph zone. Police followed his '96 Chevy S-10 after observing his vehicle swerving over the center line twice. When stopped, Singer produced proof of insurance, but no driver's license. A check of his license determined that he'd been suspended for DUI, with no warrants outstanding. He admitted to drinking four beers. Field sobriety tests showed impairment. His car was towed, and he was taken to the police station, where he refused all breath tests. He was charged with DUI, driving with a suspended license, improper lane usage and speeding. He was released on an I-bond.

Warrant violation

Rhonda L. Pulley, 44, of 96

Cedar Ave. in Lake Villa, was stopped on May 23 at 10:51 p.m. when Lake Villa Police observed that her 1987 blue Plymouth Horizon had a torn license plate sticker. A police check showed that her registration and license were valid, but she was wanted on a larceny warrant issued by Lake County, Crown Pt, Indiana. Pulley said she was not aware of the warrant. Police found that the Indiana warrant was valid, and there was a $5,000 cash bond posted. Pulley was taken to Lake County Jail in Waukegan, pending extradition.

No valid license

Jorge A. Martinez, 21, of 1222 Woodridge Dr. in Round Lake Beach, was stopped by Lake Villa Police on May 22, at 4:33 p.m. at Rte. 83 and Townline Rd. when police could not see any registration plates on his 1983 Dodge Dakota. The "registration applied for" tag was in the window, but a check of the driver showed no valid license. The driver also could not produce proof of insurance. He was charged with no valid license, driving an uninsured vehicle, and not using seat belts. His court date is June 14 at 3 p.m. at Grayslake Branch III.

Failure to reduce speed

Two unrelated accidents occurred a few days apart at the same intersection, resulting in similar charges.

On May 24, at 11:15 a.m., at the intersection of Rte. 132 and Cedar Lake Rd., Andrew Schneider rear-ended another driver who had stopped prior to making a turn onto Cedar Lake Rd. Schneider, 21, of 561 Darlington Ln. in Crystal Lake, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident and driving an uninsured vehicle.

On May 27, at 10:18 a.m., at the same intersection, Melecia Dimas-Rodriguez, of 1445 Canterbury in Mundelein, stopped to make the same turn, but did not signal her intentions. Her car was rear-ended by Albert Shilman, 35, of 37733 N. Rte. 59 in Lake Villa. Dimas-Rodriguez was charged with failure to signal a turn, and Shilman was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

All of the above-named drivers are scheduled to appear in Grayslake Branch III on June 14 at 1:30 p.m.

LINDENHURST

DUI

Marvin Moore, 34, of 2006 Burr Oak in Lindenhurst, was arrested by Lindenhurst Police on May 26 at 10:02 p.m. when he was observed turning from Sand Lake Rd. to Valley, ending up on the gravel shoulder of the road. Police followed the driver, with lights flashing, to 221 Countryside. The driver then exited the car, and, without being asked, put his hands on the roof of the car. When police asked why he did that, he said he was driving on a suspended license. Police detected alcohol on Moore's breath, and his speech was slurred.

Field sobriety tests showed impairment. The PBT reading was .116, and Moore admitted to drinking five beers in eight hours. Police found two open bottles of beer on the passenger seat, as well as a malt liquor bottle and a bottle of cognac. Police also found a blunt cigar. On Moore's Illinois temporary registration the expiration date was written over. The car's VIN did not match the VIN on the "applied for registration" tag. Moore said the car was borrowed. The VIN was registered to Warren Peters of Zion. At the station, the driver took a breathalyzer test, indicating a B.A.C. of .112. Police determined that the cigar was just a cigar. Moore was charged with DUI, driving on a suspended license, driving in the wrong lane, driving an uninsured vehicle, improper use of registration, no valid registration, B.A.C. over .08 and illegal transport of alcohol. He was released on an I-bond of $3,000 and escorted home. His court date is on June 20 at 9 a.m. in Waukegan courtroom C-402.

Marc Ryan Vitello, 23, of 435 Joren Trail in Antioch, was observed weaving in his lane, driving west-bound on Grand Ave. east of Hawthorne, at 2 a.m. on May 29. He stopped his car about a quarter-mile after Lindenhurst Police turned on their emergency equipment. Police report he had no insurance card, his car had an odor of alcohol, his speech was slurred and he admitted to drinking five beers. His field sobriety tests showed impairment. The PBT registered .149. In Vitello's right front pocket, police found a marble pipe with a screen, which had an ash residue that smelled of cannabis. At the police station, a Breathalyzer test showed a B.A.C. of .169. Vitello's car was towed. He was charged with improper lane usage, no seat belts, no insurance, possession of drug paraphernalia, DUI alcohol and DUI over .08. He posted his driver's license and $100 cash. His court appearance is scheduled for June 13 at 9 a.m. in Waukegan courtroom C-402.

Allen Leflore, 38, of 612 Cummings Ave. in Waukegan, was stopped by Lindenhurst police on May 28 at 1:31 a.m. on Grand Ave. and Munn Rd. after observing that he was driving with one brake light out and with a loud muffler. A check of his record showed his registration was suspended for an insurance violation in February 1999. The registration was for a Toyota sedan owned by Tonjua Young. Leflore had no driver's license, but he did show proof of insurance. Police observed that his eyes were bloodshot. Leflore said he was taking a friend to work in Lake Villa, and that the vehicle was owned by John Whyte. He said the plates were from the Ford Escort owned by his girlfriend, Tonjua Young. He said he intended to take care of the registration. An unopened beer was found on the rear seat. Field sobriety tests showed impairment. The PBT reading was .170, and a subsequent Breathalyzer reading was .167. The driver was charged with improper display of registration, no valid driver's license, no valid registration and DUI. He was released on a $3,000 I-bond, pending court appearance at Waukegan room C-402 on June 27 at 9 a.m.

Richard J. Wozniak, 25, of 21199 W. Woods Ave. in Lake Villa, was arrested on May 27 at 2:56 a.m. when Lindenhurst Police responded to a complaint that his Jeep almost hit a barricade on Grand Ave. near Deep Lake Rd. His vehicle was observed drifting over the yellow lines. Police detected the odor of alcohol on his breath. He said he'd "only had a couple of beer." His speech was slurred and his eyes appeared bloodshot and glassy, according to the police report. A field sobriety test showed impairment. Wozniak refused any breath tests. He was charged with improper lane usage and DUI alcohol. He was released after posting his license and $100 cash. His court date is on June 20 at 9 a.m. in Waukegan courtroom C-402.

Minor using alcohol

Lindenhurst Police observed two young men walking on Deerpath near Grand Ave., covered in mud and stumbling. George Sergot, 19, of 1701 S. Grace in Park Ridge, had no identification with him. Timothy R. Magnuson, 20, of 235 N. Aldine in Park Ridge produced a driver's license. The officer smelled alcohol on his breath. Magnuson admitted to drinking one beer at 6 p.m.. His B.A.C. was .04. Magnuson was charged with alcohol consumption by a minor. He was released on $75 cash bond. His court date is set for 10:30 on July 5 in Grayslake Branch III.

Parent University begins planning for next March

By BECKY DUBA
Staff Reporter

Committee representatives from Antioch, Lake Villa, Lindenhurst and Millburn are coordinating a Parent University one-day event to take place in March 2001.

The event is for parents of children, preschool through high school, to compile helpful information that can be used to better equip the families with the important skills required for nurturing young children into healthy young adults.

The parents will attend informational workshops, share experiences and attend a resource fair that will let them become more familiar with the community service organizations in their area.

Parent University also offers continuing presentations on requested topics throughout the year.

Chris Newton, a committee member, explained the event is still in its beginning stages. There will be a meeting June 6 at 7 p.m. to discuss it. "Right now we're trying to get volunteers to help support us." The committee is hoping that when it is put together, it will be able help parents in issues concerning many various topics from children's self esteem and discipline, to stress management and conflict resolution between siblings.

Newton said the planning of this event by the parents gives them good opportunity for participation.

"It gives them a chance to help when they might not be able to at other times because of their hectic schedules," she said.

Numerous schools are participating in this event. All local preschools will be requested to also invite their student's parents.

Antioch Run for Freedom July 4 to benefit SEDOL

T-shirts will be given to the first 1,000 registrants to pick up their race packets.

Medical support will be available through the services of the Antioch Rescue Squad.

Proceeds and donations to SEDOL go directly into programs and services that benefit special needs children. The SEDOL foundation mission is to enhance public awareness and to generate resources to enrich educational, vocational, and social opportunities for children with disabilities.

To receive more information about the race, contact Eric or Rosemary at 395-2700. Questions about the SEDOL Foundation should be directed to Wendy Smith, executive director at 680-0022.

All West Plastics expansion to create new jobs

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

All West Plastics in Antioch is expanding operations by more than double its current capacity.

All West Plastics is a custom injection molder that makes plastic parts largely used for engineering and quality control for companies such as Abbott Laboratories, Baxter Healthcare, Becton Dickinson Microbiology Systems and Motorola.

The expansion will include room for 14 all-electric molding machines that will allow the company to increase capabilities for medical molding and other industries requiring clean molding.

Additionally, there will be 2,400 square feet of assembly area, an expanded tool room, offices and large warehouse areas.

All West Plastics currently employs 65 people and expects to raise that number by 60-70 with the project's completion slated for 2001.

"I estimate that 70 percent of the jobs being created will be for low-skill labor," said Errol Westergaard, one of the company's owners. "There will be maintenance and assembly positions which won't require a high level of training."

Beautification committee adds color to town

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Antioch is more colorful thanks to the efforts of the beautification committee.

The committee is made up of 30 volunteer members whose goal is to keep the village looking nice.

Ina Johnson said, "I've been a volunteer for the beautification committee for three years. We plant flowers around town every year."

Every spring they hoe, plant and mulch gardens, bedding areas and flower barrels throughout the downtown area. Every fall the group winterizes these same areas.

The areas requiring attention include the bedding areas surrounding Antioch Village Hall and the memorial on Toft and Orchard St., the two rose gardens at the museum and next to the Dairy Queen, and the barrels along the streets in the downtown area.

Billie Horton of the department of community development said,

"We are lucky to have such a great group of volunteers in the beautification committee. Everyone works very hard to keep the village looking nice."

CPSC 'Recall Round-up' notifies parents of hazardous products

The Illinois Department of Public Health is partnering with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) this spring to help raise awareness for a "Recall Round-up" of hazardous products that may still be in people's homes.

"Through government ordered recalls, dangerous products often can be effectively removed from the shelves of retail stores," said Dr. John R. Lumpkin, state public health director. "But many older hazardous products remain in homes and can end up for sale in flea markets and second-hand stores and at garage and yard sales. These dangerous items should be repaired, returned or destroyed."

The Department, as a result of last year's passage of the Children's Product Safety Act, maintains a web site (www.idph.state.il.us/childsafety/childsafetyhome.htm) that features a comprehensive recall list of consumer products that may pose a safety risk to children.

These recalls, ordered by federal government agencies like the CPSC or the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration since 1989, are categorized by topics—bunk beds, child safety seats, clothing, furniture, gym/swing sets, infant carriers and strollers, pacifiers, playpen/play yard, toys and other children's products.

Infant car seat/carriers where the handles can unexpectedly release, causing the seat to flip forward and the infant to fall. Carriers recalled are Evenflo Model 207 and 492 made before July 27, 1997; Cosco "Arriva" and "Turnabout" models made before Sept. 9, 1997; and Kolcraft "Infant Rider," "Secura" and other models made from Jan. 1, 1993 through June 30, 1999. CPSC knows of 160 injuries, including skull fractures and concussions, involving the recalled carriers.

Pokemon balls disturbed with Burger King kids meals in November and December 1999 may pose a suffocation hazard to children under 3 years of age. Two young children have reportedly suffocated when the ball was pulled apart and half of the ball got stuck on their face, covering the nose and mouth. The Pokemon balls should be taken away from young children and discarded or returned to a Burger King restaurant for a free order of French fries.

Swimming pool dive sticks can cause rectal or vaginal impalement when a child jumps into shallow water and falls or lands on the dive stick. CPSC knows of nine such injuries to children 5-11 years of age. People should stop using the hard plastic dive sticks and throw them away.

Television carts made by Sauder Woodworking Co. and by Bush Industries Inc. can tip over. There have been three reports of injuries when televisions stored on the carts have tipped over, one involving a skull fracture suffered by a 3-year-old child. The ready-to-assemble carts have a bottom cabinet with hinged double doors. Televisions and VCRs should be removed from the carts and people should contact the manufacturer for a free repair kit to prevent tipping.

Tubular metal cribs made by Cosco Inc. from July 1994 through September 1997 can entrap or strangle a baby. These cribs can be misassembled with the mattress platform used as a side rail, creating a gap between the side rail slats. This gap has led to reports of 27 babies being entrapped and one death. In addition, when a child stands in the crib, the mattress can compress and be pushed between the bars on the crib's platform. The child can then slip between the bars and the platform and become entrapped. Cosco has received 12 complaints of entrapment due to a compressed mattress, one of which involved a death. People should contact Cosco at 1 (800) 221-6736 to make sure the crib is properly assembled and to get a new, safer mattress.

For more information about these recalls and others, people can check the Department's web site or call CPSC's toll-free hotline at 1 (800) 638-2772.

Visit Europe Without Leaving the Warm Caribbean

by JIM WARNKEN, PRESIDENT, NORTH STAR TRAVEL, INC.

Want a taste of European and the sun, sand and surf of the Caribbean? Consider a cruise visiting the Southern Caribbean.

After the Dutch kicked the Spaniards off of Curacao in 1634, they turned the island into a tropical Holland in miniature. The spectacular houses fronting the Grand Harbor made me think I was looking at the narrow mansions lining Holland's canals. Indeed, these works of architectural art make Curacao the most important island architecturally in the entire West Indies. Exciting casinos and an average temperature of 81 degrees make Curacao an island not to miss.

Our substitute for a French port would have to be Martinique in the French West Indies. Empress Josephine of France called this island home as did Madame de Maintenon, mistress of Louis XIV. Martinique is still considered to have the most beautiful women in the West Indies.

Martinique's terrain runs from miles of sandy beaches to mountains rising to 4,600 ft. Martinique was called the Island of Flowers, by the Carib Indians. A tour of the interior of this lush island will leave little doubt as to why.

For a taste of old Spain, a visit to the island of Puerto Rico is just the ticket. Under Spanish rule for almost four centuries, Puerto Rico retains the flavor of Old Spain. A walking tour of the walled city of Old San Juan is a five hundred year step back in history.

With one half of the island belonging to the Dutch (St. Maarten) and the other under French rule (St. Martin), a visitor can experience two European cultures within an area of only 37 square miles. This island is the perfect place to rent a moped, buy some Dutch cheese and French wine and head out for a picnic on a remote beach. Night life? Choose one of the islands eight casinos or fast paced disco's.

For a taste of driving on the left like they do in England, visit Jamaica or the Bahamas. I guess you could consider that a bit of culture left behind by the Brits.

I have only touched on the diverse character and European influence of our island nations to the south. Many other early societies settled the hundreds of Caribbean islands bringing with them cultures from old world Europe.

Phase 2 of motherhood has passed

This is a pep talk for all you moms out there who are in the midst of raising a small child or two—I can assure you that someday your prince will come, and he won't be wanting a peanut butter and jelly sandwich. This goes out to all of you who have given up all hope of ever again getting all your teeth brushed in one attempt or both legs shaved during the same shower. This is to reassure you that your life will get easier in some aspects as we move on up the ranks of parenthood.

After being confronted with holiday parties and celebrations in the past that took place within the confines of our home, I always felt like it took weeks to prepare for even the simplest of celebrations. Never could a room be completely cleaned without a cry from the crib. A cake could never reach the baking stage without an interruption for a diaper change. It wasn't unusual to greet our guests with clean, but wet and uncurled hair, and as for make-up—you have got to be kidding.

It wasn't until last Thanksgiving that I realized how much I had enjoyed getting the house ready for the big family feast. Then the dread that settles in the pit of my stomach as soon as Thanksgiving dinner is over—and Christmas is just weeks away—didn't rear its ugly head. It wasn't until after a recent celebration that I came to my newest revelation: I had cooked mountains of food without a single "she's looking at me" whine.

I had cleaned the house until it glistened without so much as a whisper of "leave your sister alone" escaping from my lips. I even had time to iron my outfit before the first guest arrived at the front door.

After pondering why I was able to accomplish every chore on my list, to include scrubbing the floor beneath the washing machine, I suddenly was hit with a major fact that left a lasting impression: I was no longer the mother of an infant, toddler or small child. I no longer had to start preparing for an event, no matter how simple, days in advance. I could start cleaning the house on Thursday, do the majority of the cooking on Friday, and welcome all the guests for an early Saturday afternoon party with little more than a small snag, such as forgetting colorful toothpicks for the cocktail weiners.

JINGLE FROM PRINGLE

I had been told, repeatedly, as the mother of several small children that "this too shall pass," and someday I would be looking back, longing for the days when the little ones were under foot. Well I haven't reached that point in life yet, but I have reached a level where constant supervision is no longer necessary and several minutes may actually pass before any adult intervention is required whatsoever.

So for all you moms out there who feel you never again have time to read a novel, or sit and watch a whole movie uninterrupted, eat an entire "hot" meal, or get more than three hours sleep at one time—there is hope, there is a light at the end of the tunnel. Your children, too, will someday reach adolescence, but then we have to ask ourselves: are we any more prepared for that?

And so goes another "Jingle from Pringle."

Readers with information for "Jingle from Pringle" should call Lynn Pringle at 395-6364.

Library to offer shows for readers

Antioch Public Library has many activities in store for its patrons this summer.

Children who have signed up for the summer reading program at the library will be able to see several performances at the Lions Pavilion behind the library. The time for all shows is 2 p.m.

"Perfection on Wheels" is a BMX stunt bicycling program conducted by two professional cyclists who serve as role models to communicate bicycle through stunts, music and audience interaction.

This event takes place on June 19.

David Fisher, "The Rope Warrior," demonstrates the importance of physical fitness through choreographed jump rope routines on June 27. He uses music and has a light show with glow ropes, as well as other special effects to show children the value of timing, rhythm and dance.

"Samantha's Amazing Animal Adventure," an educational and entertaining trained animal show and petting zoo, will be at the pavilion on July 6.

On July 14, "Sing and Sign" with Gaia and Jonnie will help children learn about the hearing impaired while addressing universal themes such as acceptance and self-esteem.

"Don't Just Sit There" is an interactive show with high energy songs to get everyone laughing. It will be held on July 17.

Paul Lee will perform magic and illusions on July 22.

Registration for the summer reading program is open until June 10. Call the library for more details at 395-0874.

Emmons eighth-grade band performs last concert

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

The Emmons School eighth-grade band performed its last concert for the Antioch Rotary Club.

Band director Beverly Kramer said, "The kids are excited from September on about getting to come play for the Rotary at the end of the year."

"This year's class is the smallest group of eighth-graders to participate in the band," said Kramer. "This group of 13 is the smallest group I've ever brought to perform before the Rotary."

"It's fun to see how kids progress with new instruments," said Kyle Moncelle, who plays the French horn and the alto saxophone.

"We get the opportunity to play a variety of instruments," said Kerry McMenamin, who plays the flute, alto saxophone and percussion. "Every year you get to try something new in addition to the instrument you have been playing. You can play your new instrument in the beginning band when you are starting out."

The band was accompanied by assistant governor for Rotary District 6440, who played the honorary cymbals for the national anthem.

The mostly woodwind ensemble then played "Amazing Grace." The flutists were given the spotlight when they played "Danny Boy." The performance ended with "America the Beautiful."

Assistant conductor Kara

Korom plays the flute and mallets. Rachel Arellano plays the clarinet.

Renee Riedel plays the clarinet and the alto saxophone. Drew Kingston plays all three types of saxophone—alto, tenor, and baritone, as does Mike Loe.

Julie Rohde plays the flute and clarinet. Jennifer Love plays the piccolo in addition to the flute and clarinet.

Class valedictorian Katherine Reynolds focuses on the flute.

Natalie Kulezsa is involved with percussion and clarinet. Lindsay Davis plays the clarinet.

Wesley Kurz plays the alto saxophone, and Bob Caulfield plays percussion.

"We've done this at the end of the school year for the last few years and we just love it," said Kramer.

Worried about paying their college tuition?

Sending a kid away to college for four years can cost more than $60,000.

College of Lake County

19351 West Washington Street, Grayslake, Illinois

We can save you a chunk of that. Interested?

CLC can help you save on tuition costs, even if your son or daughter attends another college.

- Courses offered days, evenings and weekends and online
- Grayslake and Lakeshore campuses, Southlake Educational Center and Adlai Stevenson High School

The savings work like this:

Many students at other colleges save on tuition by earning credits during CLC's summer session. CLC credits transfer easily to other institutions, and, with a little planning, the credits earned at CLC can add up to a full semester's credit. At a private college, that can amount to a savings of more than $7,500, if you consider tuition and fees and room and board.

Call (847) C-O-L-L-E-G-E for information
Registration is now underway. Classes start June 5.

*Figures based on information from the U.S. Department of Education on average tuition for private colleges and universities, plus average annual room and board costs of $4,500.

Inside out

He sat there in front of his television. The hands were sweaty and the heart was racing.

Let's call him Steve for now—he's a good friend of mine so we'll spare him any further grief.

Anyway, Steve eagerly awaited that final baseball score of the evening. It happened to be the Atlanta Braves against the L.A. Dodgers.

If the Braves, practically a 2-1 favorite in the game because Greg Maddux was pitching, posted the proverbial W, Steve would breathe a sigh of relief because he would have gone 7-6, thus drawing him close to even for the evening.

But the fact remained that he would still be in the negative because of the juice. Usually the way it works is how much ever you bet, the bookie takes roughly 10 percent in the event of a loss.

In other words, you bet $50 on a respective game and lose, you're going to forfeit at least $55. That number could escalate even higher depending on the odds, especially if you're siding with the favorite and they happen to falter.

At any rate, it just so happened to be that Steve was already thousands of dollars in the hole and just like all compulsive gamblers, he was looking to inch back into the game. Fat chance!

When the Braves did pull out a 2-1 nailbiter, Steve was, yes, relieved, but in the same token, very distraught after he'd sat back and realized what the heck he was doing and just how big of a hole he had gotten himself into.

But for three years, he was drawn to the television, betting on sometimes as many as 15 games a day, seven days a week.

He was trapped on the inside looking out. There wasn't much room to hide.

Sure—he could cut his losses and take it on the chin. Or he could get crazy and try and win it all back. It won't likely happen in one day.

But the drive, adrenaline and for lack of a better word, stupidity became the mindset because he was back at it again the next day.

Just trying to get back even $50 bucks would be not only a monetary victory, but a moral one as well.

The scary thing was he knew he wouldn't get everything back—it was merely the idea of having all of the 'action' going on. That's what got his juices going.

And that, my friends, was the sin of it all. He knew he'd lost quite a bit of money (he didn't make that much for a living to begin with).

But that's what goes through the mind of someone who has lost quite a bit and in reality, didn't really have any control of the outcome whatsoever.

Gambling wound up governing Steve's life. He probably lost a few good friends along the way as well.

And for what—to let someone else dictate your cash-flow and psyche. It isn't worth it!

Just go back to the early 1980s and listen to the old classic from the Scorpions suggests, "Passion does rule the game."

It's been four years since his last wager with a bookie. And I'll bet you a coke that he's glad to be back on the outside looking in!

It's official! Sequoits regional champions

Malec tosses three-hit gem

By JOHN PHELPS
Sports Editor

With the final out forthcoming, the excitement was at a premium amongst the Antioch faithful at Bowen Park in Waukegan.

That's because the top-seeded Sequoits were on the brink of their first-ever regional title.

And when first baseman Chris Kocinski caught a weak fly ball to end the game, the reality set in as winning pitcher Chris Malec leaped for joy from the mound.

It was Malec, only a sophomore, that showed the composure of a veteran in mowing down a potent Zion offense. But it wasn't easy.

"I was pretty nervous when I walked a couple of guys," said Malec, who improved his record to 9-1 on the year. "But our pitching coach (Terry Periman) told me to loosen my grip on the ball. It seemed to have worked."

Malec wound up going the distance, firing a three-hitter with six strikeouts.

"This feels great," added the jubilant Malec. "Our defense has been really solid all season and it was great to get the offensive support.

And speaking of offense, Malec and the Sequoits got all of the offense they would need after putting a 4-spot on the board in the top of the fifth inning.

Designated hitter Joe Finkelberg and shortstop Brad Groth opened the frame with back-to-back singles. The key hit perhaps came when speedster and leadoff hitter, right fielder Tim Clutter, beat out a bunt to load the bases.

"After T.C. beat that out, I knew we were going to break through with some runs," said left fielder Brandon Clutts and third baseman Nick Kocinski.

And ironically, it was Clutts and (Nick) Kocinski who jacked back-to-back two-run doubles, accounting for a 4-0 lead.

"We did a great job of hitting the ball to the right side today," said (Nick) Kocinski. "And Malec and the defense were tough out there today."

(Nick) Kocinski finished 1-for-4 with the two-run double while Clutts was 2-for-4 with a double, two RBI and one run scored. (Chris) Kocinski also doubled and Groth was 2-for-3 as Antioch banged out nine hits on the afternoon.

"We played well on both sides today," said head coach Paul Petty. "They (Zion) is a never-say-die team that has come back a lot this year. But we controlled the game and made things happen for ourselves."

The only times Zion really threatened came in the bottom of the fourth when Brent Bjork walked and stole second. He tried for third but catcher Jason Schuler gunned him down. The Zee-Bee's also threatened an inning earlier when Brett Bakanec tried to stretch a double into a triple. But the Sequoits didn't fall for it as right fielder Clutter hit cutoff man second baseman John Logan, who fired a bullet to (Nick) Kocinski to nail him at third.

With the victory, Antioch, which also set a school record with its 28th win of the season, travels to the Barrington sectional Saturday, June 3 for a semifinal date with Prairie Ridge.

Defense sparkles but offense fizzles

Sequoit softball bows out in regionals

By JOHN PHELPS
Sports Editor

Talk about character. You don't expect too much when a team starts four sophomores. But the exception can be made if you're playing the Antioch varsity girls softball team.

They split two close games earlier in the season, so something had to give when the Antioch traveled to Warren for the opening round of the Zion-Benton regional.

The second half of the season has been one to remember for the upstart Antioch varsity softball team. The timely hitting and solid pitching were coming together and showing signs of life.

And that was the case Thursday, only Warren executed just a little bit better in coming away with a 3-0 victory.

"I'm very proud of the girls," said head coach Steve Wapon. "Our young team really developed a lot of character this season. Today, we played well but hurt ourselves a little. We just couldn't quite turn the corner."

Pitcher Abbey Thomas (7-14) threw another solid game, scattering eight hits while fanning three.

"Besides one inning, we played very sound defense and Abbey had another strong outing," noted Wapon. "We just needed to score runs to take the pressure off her and the defense."

Warren (18-12) scored all of the runs it would need after putting a 2-spot on the board in the bottom of the third inning when winning pitcher Pam Schimanski belted a two-run single. Warren would add an insurance run in the sixth when Ashlee Browder tripled in Danielle Davila, who earlier singled.

The Sequoits, who finished the season 10-22, threatened in the top of the fourth frame. With two outs, Amanda Pollitt got the first hit, a single, off Schimanski. Kaeleen O'Connell then singled but Laura Weber made incidental contact with the ball after hitting a dribbler down the first-base line. She was called out for interference.

"It was just a bad break," said Wapon. "That happened twice to us today where the batter hit the ball and their momentum carried them, only to have the ball curve back in and hit them."

The Sequoits also threatened in the sixth when they Crystal Massimo led off with a single and was sacrificed to second by Katie Birk. But a strikeout and flyout ended the any scoring chances.

Incidentally, the Sequoits were playing without star player Megs Kotlarz, who was sidelined after taking an errant throw off the jaw during practice the previous week.

"It's unfortunate because she's been our MVP and a four-year starter," said Wapon. "Her jaw was broken in two places. She had surgery and then had it wired shut, which should last for 4-6 weeks. But she's tough and will rebound from it strongly like I know she can."

CLC's Kazakevich claims national championship

By ROB BACKUS
Staff Reporter

In their first real action this spring, the CLC women's tennis team had an outstanding national tournament in Tucson, Ariz.

Ania Kazakevich won the national championship at number one singles. After two uneventful victories, Kazakevich used a big forehand and well-placed ground shots to best three of the top women in the nation on her way to the title becoming just the second CLC champion.

"When the chips were down, Ania played superior tennis," said Head coach Richard Watson. "She demonstrated poise, maturity and excellent strategy."

Kazakevich also teamed up with Heather Lawrence to place second in the nation at number one doubles. Both Lawrence and Kazakevich were named All-Americans.

Lawrence also played well at number three singles before losing in the semifinals.

"I was really proud of Heather's effort," said Watson.

Gaby Nichols also reached the semifinals at number five singles.

"[Nichols] showed a lot of guts and concentration," said Watson.

Lisa Jurica overcame numerous injuries and a first round upset to win the consolation title at number two singles.

"Jurica teamed up with Michelle Gottschalk to reach the quarterfinals at number two doubles.

Gottschalk also reached the quarterfinals at number four singles.

When it was all said and done, CLC finished fifth out of 26 teams, just .5 points out of fourth and 1.5 points out of third.

"Without much spring practice we performed better and placed higher than expected," said Watson. "I'm really proud of them."

The men didn't fare nearly as well in their own national tournament in Tyler, Texas on May 15-20.

At No. 6 singles, Chris Pry won an opening round match and Mario Amien won a consolation match at number two singles, which was two more matches than the Lancers had won last year.

Both years CLC faced little competition in the spring schedule but were crushed by teams in the national tournament that featured professional players.

"It's tough to get her and play teams that give six to eight scholarships and can recruit worldwide," said Watson. "But I was proud of our team's effort. All of our guys battled to the last shot, I couldn't ask for more."

Richard Watson will be leaving the CLC tennis program after six successful seasons. He is considering the men's head coaching position at Michigan State, among other offers. There has not yet been a decision on who will succeed Watson as men's and women's head coach.

Students with special needs, challenges find respect at Special Education District of Lake County the 20th century, disabled children were excluded from many U.S. schools as recently as the 1960s.

SEDOL, founded by Larry Villemont, was established in 1960 under The School Code of Illinois. In cooperation with 37 member school districts, SEDOL was to provide program planning, instructional programs, related services and professional staff development for the education of the disabled—from birth to age 21—who resided within the member school boundaries.

"What is so unique about SEDOL is the fact that we take children from birth," commented Glenda Mill, SEDOL's information coordinator.

Federal mandate, under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), requires all public schools to offer free education to disabled students ages 3 to 21. However, SEDOL goes the extra mile to offer diagnostic and early intervention services to families with disabled infants. Once the child turns three, his home school district takes over the diagnostic testing and evaluations needed to determine appropriate school placement, dependent on the severity of the disability and the child's needs.

SEDOL has a reputation for being one of the largest organizations of its kind to serve a county. It services about 2,100 students with varying degrees of disability. Yearly, it provides diagnostic services to over 3,000 children countywide. A staff of about 900 is employed, including teachers, therapists, psychologists, social workers and nurses.

SEDOL has six campuses scattered throughout the county that accommodate children who have disabilities that make it difficult if not altogether impossible to place them with mainstream students. However, with the Regular Education Initiative and the emphasis on inclusion programming, SEDOL's goal is to try to include as many students as possible back into their district schools. With about 100 sector classrooms located within the 37 member districts, these children are able to receive instructional, resource and itinerant special education programs within their home district. Each sector has an educational team that includes a supervisor, teachers, assistants, therapists, and speech and language pathologists.

"We bring services to our district member schools as much as possible," noted Mill. "We support districts who want to provide SEDOL services in their home districts, because it enables us to service more of the severely disabled."

When Maureen Koza had triplet boys 13 years ago, they appeared to be fine. However, by the time the boys were 18 months old, two of them were diagnosed with autism. Since then, Dan and Sean have been a part of SEDOL. Dan currently attends Oak Grove, a sector school in Libertyville. When he was 5, Koza said Dan needed help with behavioral problems.

"There was really no place for him at the time, so SEDOL piloted a new autistic behavior options class," explained Koza. "Dan was able to get a lot of his behaviors under control. Now, he can read and even do math."

Sean is a student in another sector school, the Hawthorne Option School in Vernon Hills. His needs are entirely dif-

Without SEDOL, these kids would have nothing," Barb Raia, assistant teacher in the Special Education District of Lake County (SEDOL), believes her statement pretty much sums up the important role that this education cooperative plays within the lives of many Lake County families with disabled children.

Historically, people with disabilities were often banished to hospitals, asylums or other institutions that offered little or no education. It wasn't until the beginning of the 19th century that educators like French physician Jean Marc Gaspard Itard discovered that special teaching methods could be effective in educating disabled children. From then on, schools for the handicapped—particularly the blind and deaf—were established. However, despite the fact that special education classes within regular school programs began as early as the beginning of

Graduating from orange to burnt sienna

Every year around this time, large numbers of parents are shedding a tear or two. Not just because school ends and summer vacation begins, though this can cause even the most rational parent to break down and weep like a baby. No, it's that other big June event: GRADUATION.

I have already done more than my share of graduation crying. I watched my older two sons graduate from grade school, high school and one from college (one to go) and these ceremonies never failed to make me sniffle and snort. I don't know why, exactly, except that it always seems like both an end and a beginning in the parent-child relationship.

This year, I was hoping to avoid that scene. After all, I'm the mother of a fifth-grader and a kindergartner. They don't "graduate," right?

Wrong. For those of you who aren't currently parents of children that young (and oh, how I envy you), many schools have a little graduation ceremony for kindergartners. I don't know if this is a new fad, since I can't say that I remember attending such a ceremony for my oldest two sons. Of course, I can't say that I remember what I ate for lunch yesterday, either.

I am, however, mystified as to WHY we hold a kindergarten graduation ceremony. Aside from the fact that the children will be going to school all day instead of a half day, first grade will not be much different. Maybe it's to prepare them for those yummy school cafeteria lunches. Whatever the reason, I thought that pre-school graduation already covered the transition from "baby" to "student."

Just last year we attended our daughter's pre-school graduation, made particularly memorable by her teacher's choice to bypass traditional graduation march songs like "Pomp and Circumstance," and use one she thought more appropriate for her class: "Bad to the Bone." As my daughter boogied up the aisle wearing funky sunglasses and bobbing her head to the beat of "b-b-b-bad," I wasn't sure if I was at a graduation or a Harley convention. It was memorable, all right.

Now here it is, just a year later, and we're preparing for ANOTHER graduation, this time from kindergarten. I can't help feeling blasé about it, but my daughter is excited. She is also misinformed.

"Honey," I corrected her, "there won't be a party and presents this time. That's only when you graduate from grade school, high school or college."

She looked at me as if I had half a brain. This sounds bad, until you realize that it's still an improvement over the way she'll look at me when she's in high school.

"That's stupid," she muttered, and then suddenly brightened.

"But do I get a diploma?"

"Of course! That's the best part!"

Fortunately, that seemed to satisfy her. As for me, I think the best part of kindergarten graduation is that there won't be any long speeches. After all, what would a kindergarten graduation speaker say? I can only imagine...

KINDERGARTEN COMMENCEMENT 2000

Girls and boys, faculty members, parents and relatives: oh, wait...before we begin, I need to know just one thing...has everyone here been through the metal detector yet? Yes? Wonderful, I feel better now.

As I was saying, it is with great pride that I have accepted your request to speak here today at your Kindergarten graduation. I look out at your clean, smiling young faces, and I am proud to see that there is not a single Kool-Aid mustache in the bunch. Not to mention the majority of you have your shoes on the right feet. I'll bet your parents are so proud.

I thought hard about what I wanted to say to you today, because this is a very special moment in your young lives. Not quite as special as potty training, mind you. From a parent's perspective, that's a hard moment to top. Still, after this summer vacation, you will be stepping aboard that bus to spend not just a half-day, but an entire day away Mom and Dad. Sure, they will miss you terribly, but don't worry about them. Especially me, I am going to be just fine. If I never see another episode of Blue's Clues, I think I'll survive.

Anyway, I realize that, as graduation audiences go, you have the attention span of a large gnat. So in closing, I just want to say that while some of you may be sad to leave your favorite teacher and first classroom behind, just remember this:

Next year, you get the BIG BOX of crayons! And someday, if you're really good, they'll let you use a pen.

Thank you, and have a great summer!

ferent than Dan's. Sean doesn't have language skills, but an alternative communications device, called a Dynamite, helps Sean to communicate his cognitive thoughts to those around him.

"This device has made Sean very proficient, and took the frustration level down completely for him and our family," said Koza.

"I really don't know where my sons would be without SEDOL...probably away from home or out of state," she continued. "There are not a lot of teachers or facilities available for autistic children."

SEDOL was also responsible for piloting the first total communication program for deaf and hard-of-hearing students in Lake County. The John Powers Center in Vernon Hills offers instructional and mainstream settings for these children, along with those who have communication disorders, from early childhood through junior high school. All the classes are taught through signed English. Once the students reach the high school level, they have the option of attending programs at Libertyville High School.

The Laremont School in Gages Lake provides educational services to students who have moderate to severe mental impairment and multiple disabilities. Many require extensive attention on a daily basis including feeding, cleaning, moving and medical needs.

Laremont is where Raia helps out with the Trainable Mentally Handicapped (TMH). Her experience with SEDOL is twofold. As a learning-disabled child, she reaped the benefits that SEDOL offers to handicapped children. As an adult, she has helped to give those benefits to new generations of learning-disabled children for 17 years.

"Without SEDOL, these kids would be at home or in an institution. Many of them would have nothing and do nothing," stressed Raia, who is married to John Raia, a physically handicapped custodian at SEDOL. "We get these kids to do a lot of things. It's a challenge, but I really enjoy it."

The Marjorie Ureche Early Childhood Center located within Laremont serves severely disabled children ages three to six.

The hallways of the early childhood center are scattered with an eclectic array of toys, and adaptive equipment/devices that are pieces of equipment adapted to the needs of the child. Many are used to help the children with skills we take for granted such as standing or sitting up. The environment is an integration of therapy and education.

"Therapy is a large part of SEDOL's program, and it is equally important as the academics," explained Mill, pointing out the myriad of therapists employed, from speech therapists to occupational therapists.

The Gages Lake School, which is connected by a common gymnasium to Laremont, serves to educate students with severe behavioral disorders. Children of primary through junior high school age are provided with a full service school program until they are able to return to their home districts, or go on to SEDOL's high school level behavioral program.

"The first step to successful treatment here is that we have a nurturing staff that should always respect these kids and their parents," emphasized Gages Lake School Principal Tony Jones. "I tell my staff if they can't respect who they are dealing with, then they can't work here."

Jones' fierce protection of the emotional well-being of his students and their parents is indicative of the SEDOL staff. Behavioral disorders are the most predominant disability within SEDOL, affecting about 32 percent of the entire student population.

The Cyd Lash Academy in Gages Lake offers an alternative high school setting for adolescents with severe behavior and emotional disabilities. Once again, this program offers a temporary placement until the students can successfully return to their district schools. Individual Education Programs (IEP) are designed for each student to meet his or her academic, behavioral and emotional needs. If they successfully meet the program requirements, they are placed in a re-entry program which helps to mainstream them into regular school settings.

"Individualization is another unique part of our program," said Mill. "Although the children are placed within specific disability groups, their needs are addressed on an individual basis. They are not all the same, even though they may share the same disability."

Fairfield Academy Alternative Behavior Treatment Center in Mundelein provides educational services, in a residential setting, to high school-aged students with sexually problematic and aggressive behaviors. During their stay at the center, while undergoing intensive therapy and treatment, the students receive an educational curriculum that runs parallel with the Mundelein High School District 120 programs. This allows the students to meet Dist. 120's graduation requirements.

Yet another alternative educational program within SEDOL is designed for students in sixth grade through high school who have been frequently suspended or expelled from their district schools. The ROE Alternative Program in Zion focuses on the academic and social skills needed to help these students return to their district schools, or seek optional education or employment opportunities.

Within SEDOL's scope to include all disabled people through the age of 21, it offers transitional services to those students who are ready to become adult members of the community. SEDOL considers the transition period from school to this new phase in life a significant milestone. The process is initiated, when a student reaches the age 14 1/2 through a transition planning document that is designed to help the child successfully meet an adult lifestyle dependent on the individual needs of the student.

Program offerings include vocational and life skills training, along with social, survival and parental skills education. SEDOL even has a fully equipped apartment in Grayslake that is specifically used for these educational purposes.

SEDOL is funded primarily (51 percent) by the tuition collected from the 37 member school districts. Each member district is federally funded depending on the number of special needs students residing in that particular district. In turn, the districts are billed monthly, by SEDOL, on a program cost basis for the students each district has enrolled in SEDOL programs.

Other sources of funding include state and federal grants, and contractual fees and the SEDOL Foundation.

"We have been very successful because we support a wonderful cause," said Smith. "SEDOL is noted as being one of the best in the country."

Guitarist, Ronney Jordan on tour

British guitarist Ronny Jordan will be touring select cities in North America for the first time in almost three years, and will have local dates in Chicago at Navy Pier, June 9 and Milwaukee's Riverside Theatre, June 10. Fresh off his European tour, Jordan will perform songs from his critically acclaimed label debut on Blue Note Records, "A Brighter Day."

This self-produced album celebrates what Jordan, and many of his fans, see as his most effective guitar playing thus far. "I've long considered Blue Note the most charismatic jazz label in the world, and they gave me an opportunity to finally show more depth," says Jordan. "I have to follow the courage of my convictions. And this attempt to prove that, once and for all, has truly led me to a brighter day in my career." There's no shortage of depth on "A Brighter Day," the album showcases Jordan's virtuosity and encompasses tributes to past heroes, such as the Roy Ayers' classic "Mystic Voyage" which also features Mr. Ayers and Stefon Harris' vibe work on "5/8 In Flow." Nods to the future include the DJ Spinna remix of "A Brighter Day" which features the popularly regarded rap artist Mos Def.

Jordan was one of the leaders of the early 90's acid jazz movement and is credited with the hybrid of jazz, funk and hip hop that is the genre's signature sound. For additional information, call (212)545-5874.

'Raisin in the Sun' still carries its weight well

A Raisin in the Sun," Lorraine Hansberry's edgy, articulate 1959 drama of race relations and a Chicago South Side family's own personal struggles, loses none of its acute power in a 2000 revival.

Directed by Chuck Smith at the Goodman Theatre, this is one highly potent play. The value of the dollar has risen considerably in the intervening years, but the thorny issues of money—or lack thereof—are as constant as ever.

All the action takes place in the Youngers' tiny, well-worn apartment. Lena, the matriarch of this black family, is about to receive a $10,000 life insurance benefit following the loss of her husband, and each member of her family, suffering from "acute ghetto-itis," is dreaming and scheming about how to spend the windfall. Her daughter entertains the thought of medical school, while her daughter-in-law would like nothing more than for the extended family to buy a house of their own. Travis, the strapping young grandson, would be happy enough to give up the living room sofa for his own room.

But Lena's son, the frustrated Walter, is perhaps the biggest dreamer of all, lusting after the quick wealth (And renewed happiness in his marriage?) he imagines what will come from investing in a liquor store. He figures anything will be better than his chauffeur's job, or the domestic work his wife and mother engage in.

Hansberry masterfully sets up realistic scenes of conflict between husband and wife, mother and son, brother and sister.

And by putting a down payment on a house in an all-white neighborhood, more sparks are ignited as the so-called "neighborhood improvement association" tries to thwart the family's move. Ultimately, however, this situation sets the stage for Walter to show some spunk or continue his old ways.

This cast is superb, led by Harry Lennix as the proud but mixed-up son, and Irma P. Hall as Lena, the vibrant, hard-working mother who provides the glue that binds the family. There's nice work from Celeste Williams as the wife, T'Keyah Crystal Keymah as the sister and young Raphael Chestang as the son. The same holds true of performances by James Meredith and Dwain Perry in minor roles.

"A Raisin in the Sun" continues through June 3. Tickets available at (312) 443-3800.

movie review

Rob Backus

It is not fair to call this movie a sequel. Sure, Tom Cruise reprises his role as IMF agent Ethan Hunt, but that's where the similarities to 1996's "Mission: Impossible" end.

Instead of "Mission: Impossible" director Brian De Palma's reliance on stealth and a suspenseful plot, director John Woo took a "shoot first, ask questions later" approach to this sequel.

This new approach should draw a larger crowd to the box office, as it does not force the audience to think much, unlike the first "Mission." It should also give Tom Cruise the hit he needs after the flop of 1999's "Eyes Wide Shut."

It's amazing how utterly dissimilar the two "Missions" are, despite both featuring scripts by Robert Towne, who penned the script for the film noir classic "Chinatown."

I guess John Woo makes all the difference. Woo ("Face/Off," "The Killer") is famous for his slow-motion action sequences, which are prevalent in "M:I 2."

The film begins in a biological lab in which a scientist injects himself with Chimera, a deadly virus that kills if an anti-virus is not administered within 20 hours.

We then see the same scientist on a plane, sitting next to who appears to be Hunt. It turns out to be impostor Sean Ambrose (Dougray Scott), an agent who betrays IMF, steals the virus and attempts to sell it for 37 million pounds.

After the thievery occurs, we see the real Ethan Hunt for the first time. Hunt, who is on vacation, is scaling a mountain in the first of many breath-taking stunts in the movie.

Woo rarely uses green screens to simulate scenery in his movies and it is easy to tell that he does not use CGI in this scene.

More importantly, the audience can clearly see that it is Cruise who is scaling the face of the mountain, not a stunt double. In fact, Cruise did 95 percent of the stunts in "M:I 2," some even better, and more dangerous, than this one.

Hunt is recruited to get the virus back, but he needs some help. He tracks down international thief

Tom Cruise stars as Ethan Hunt in "Mission: Impossible 2."

Nyah Hall (Thandie Newton) and recruits her for the mission. Hunt hopes the thief will be able to locate Ambrose, who used to be in love with her.

Hunt also recruits computer hacker Luther Steckell (Ving Rhames) who also reprises his original "Mission: Impossible" role.

What happens after this are a series of stealth and misdirection scenes as Hunt attempts to discover what Chimera is and what Ambrose is going to do with it.

After Hunt discovers Chimera's destructive power, he then breaks into the aforementioned biological lab in order to destroy the virus.

The rest of the movie is filled with numerous action scenes including shoot-outs, motorcycle chases and the final battle between

Hunt and Ambrose, all of which are some of the best action sequences I have ever seen.

"M:I 2" is probably the best action movie I have ever seen, even better than "The Matrix."

I only have two real complaints about the movie.

For one, Anthony Hopkins's role as Hunt's IMF mentor seemed hastily added and is a waste of Hopkins's time and talent.

And two, I actually enjoyed the first "Mission: Impossible" so I would have liked a more suspenseful plot.

However, the action scenes more than outweigh the holes in the plot.

I gave "Mission: Impossible 2" four and a half out of five popcorn boxes.

Symphony Orchestra celebrates with 'free-for-all'

To celebrate the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's first summer residency concert of the new millennium, Ravinia Festival, with the generous support of Sara Lee Corporation, will give away every seat in its state-of-the-art Pavilion and on its famous lawn through a random drawing. Dubbed the "Ravinia Free-For-All," the June 24 concert will feature Ravinia Music Director Christoph Eschenbach conducting the CSO in performances of two of the most popular of Beethoven's symphonies, Nos. 8 and 9 ("Choral").

Joining the Chicago Symphony Chorus in the jubilant "Ode to Joy" finale of the Ninth Symphony will be soprano Pamela Armstrong, mezzo-soprano Janis Taylor, tenor Vinson Cole and bass Peter Rose.

This special event marks only the second time in Ravinia's illustrious history that music lovers have been invited to a free CSO concert. Ticket-winning audiences packed the park in 1995 for a thank-you concert, made possible through the Sara Lee Foundation, that launched Ravinia's 60th season and unveiled major renovations at the venue.

"We saw this first concert of a new era as a fitting opportunity to thank people in the Chicago area for all these years of support. And there is no better way to say 'thank you' than by treating them to a night of the most memorable music ever composed," said Zarin Mehta, President and Chief Executive Officer of Ravinia Festival.

The easiest way to enter the contest is by completing a form at the Festival website, www.ravinia.org. Entrants may create an equivalent written request. Entry forms may be sent by fax at 266-5440 or by mail to "Ravinia Free-For-All Concert", P.O. Box 564, Highland Park 60035. Completed forms must be received by April 30. All entries will be placed in a random drawing.

Winners will be notified by mail. A complete list of winners may be requested in writing along with a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the above address. Winners' names will also be posted on the Ravinia Festival website, where a complete description of the rules is also available.

Summer's performances offer sneak preview to Olympic Games

Equine sports enthusiasts won't need to travel as far as the Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia, this summer to witness the Grand Prix de Dressage, the pinnacle of competitive horsemanship. Lake County's own Tempel Lipizzan stallions will prance through the awe-inspiring precision of Olympic-level dressage during public performances at their countryside home every Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. and Sunday at 1 p.m., June 21 through August 30.

Tempel Farms is one of only a handful of places in the world where rare and beautiful Lipizzans — "the dancing white stallions" — regularly perform the 16th century art/sport that was the regal forerunner to Olympic equestrian competition. While many of the movements showcased in classical Lipizzan performances are the same as those seen in the Olympics, the most famous white stallions have a few tricks up their hooves that won't even be found in Sydney — most notably, the breathtaking Airs Above the Ground, dramatic leaps and lifts that seemingly defy gravity.

The hour and 20-minute Tempel Lipizzan performances is set to classical music and follows the advancement of the Lipizzan from frisky foals frolicking alongside their mares, to animated young stallions in the early stages of training, to the highly refined Quadrille or "Ballet of the White Stallions," in which four to six of the most highly trained horses perform dressage's most difficult movements in perfect and beautiful unison.

The Tempel Lipizzan stallions will perform the 16th Century art/sport that was the regal forerunner to Olympic equestrian competition, every Wednesday and Sunday, June 21 through August 30, at their countryside home in Old Mill Creek.

After each public performance of the Lipizzans, guests are invited to tour the historic mahogany and brass show stables for a behind-the-scenes look at the magnificent stallions. Today approximately 100 of the rare white horses, or five percent of the world's entire Lipizzan population, reside at Temple Farms.

Temple Farms is located in Old Mill Creek, near Gurnee Mills Mall (take Hunt Club Rd. north and follow signs). Tickets are available at the gate. Prices are $16 for adults, $13 for senior citizens and $6 for children, ages 4 through 14/ Group discounts may be arranged by calling 224-5330. In case of inclement weather, performances are held indoors. parking is free. For additional information, please call 623-7272.

COUNTY DIGEST

Eligible for storm aid

The southern portion of Lake County has been declared a state disaster area following the severe storm of May 18. This declaration enables affected communities to receive state financial aid for expenses related to storm damage. For assistance or further information, residents should contact their insurance companies, public utilities, or local village halls.

Inspectors available

This summer, Lake County residents who have building emergencies will be able to reach the county's building, zoning and site development inspectors on weekends. An emergency telephone number (360-6330) will be available through Oct. 31. Recorded messages will be checked repeatedly by building inspectors "on call" for the weekend.

Tire collection

The Solid Waste Agency of Lake County will be holding a tire collection June 9 and June 10 from 8 a.m. - 3 p.m. Unwanted, rimless tires from residents, municipalities and the agricultural community can be dropped off at the Lake County Division of Transportation located at 600 W. Winchester Rd. in Libertyville during the two-day event. Tires that are commercially generated will not be accepted.

County may get power to regulate peakers

By SANDY HARTOGH
Staff Reporter

Lake County environmentalists and residents opposed to the noise and air pollution that they say will emanate from proposed peaker power plants may soon have the support of the county board in requesting more stringent state regulations for the plants.

According to Lake County Board member Sandy Cole (R-Grayslake Dist. 11), a proposal for the county to hire an environmental attorney will be discussed at the next county board meeting slated for early June. The attorney's purpose would be to help petition the Illinois Pollution Control Board (IPCB) to advise stricter laws be placed on peaker power plants.

"The IPCB's advice becomes rules by which the IEPA (Illinois Environmental Protection Agency) operates," stated Cole.

Through a state mechanism called "rule-making" Cole said the county, consultants and the environmental attorney would work with the Lake County State's Attorney to formally draft a request for changes in IPCB policies concerning the gas-powered plants.

In particular, Cole mentioned plant location, pollution control devices and the 12-month calculations used to determine the amount of pollution spewed from the plants within the three-month period they would be in use.

"The weakness of the power plants is based on a yearly average," Cole pointed out. "There's a loophole we can't stop breathing in August and start breathing again in November!"

John Cross, spokesman for the IPCB noted that IPCB provisions require any rules that are adopted to

Sheriff's Office welcomes furry new detective

By SANDY HARTOGH
Staff Reporter

The Lake County Sheriff's Office has announced an addition to its team of specialized detectives.

The 56-pound, yellow-haired snoop tickled toes and delved into purses while demonstrating her extraordinary talents at a press conference held by Sheriff Gary Del Re.

"We have a new addition to our family," said Del Re.

He proudly introduced Comet, a yellow Labrador retriever, and her handler Deputy Ed Gages as members of the Explosive Detection Canine Team (EDCT). Gages and Comet will play a vital role in Lake County by providing an additional service of public safety through explosives-related enforcement.

According to Del Re, the Sheriff's Office was the only Chicago area law enforcement agency to be chosen by the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) Canine Operations Branch to take part in its Explosive Detection Canine training program. When Deputy Chief Bob Randall first heard of the program, he facilitated a proposal for the Sheriff's Office to be considered for the program.

A five-year agreement with ATF allowed the Sheriff's Office to obtain Comet who, along with other canine explosive detectives, was provided to ATF by the Guide Dogs for the Blind Foundation.

Gages, an 18-year veteran and experienced canine handler for the Sheriff's Office, was sent to the ATF Canine Training Facility in Front Royal, Va. Once there, he underwent per-

Health Dept. restrained from shutting down Gurnee restaurant

By SANDY HARTOGH
Staff Reporter

A 10-day extension, given by the Lake County Dept. of Health to the Avalon Family Restaurant in Gurnee, was apparently not enough time for the popular neighborhood eatery at 4821 Grand Ave. to comply with food service ordinances.

After failing a May 24 inspection by health department sanitarians, Avalon owners Emanuel and Bessy Kritikos were given written notice by Environmental Health Services Director Colin Thacker that their food service permit would be revoked the following day.

Thacker cited improper temperatures for food storage, cross-contamination of food, and poor hygienic practices by employees as the reasons for the permit revocation.

Hours before the restaurant was to be closed by the health department, the Kritikos' received a temporary restraining order from the Lake County Circuit Court. The restraining order stated that the health department violated several procedures of the Administrative Hearing Act, including failure to provide the Kritikos' attorney, Hercules Paul Zagoras with the revocation order.

The restraining order also noted that the restaurant would sustain economic damage through food loss and a poor reputation as a result of the forced shut-down.

Fugitives taken by surprise

By SANDY HARTOGH
Staff Reporter

Over 30 unsuspecting people in Lake County were arrested in a surprise warrant sweep coordinated by the Lake County Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG) and the Lake County Sheriff's Office. Approximately 15 six-man teams comprised of federal, state, county and local police officers, along with canine units, joined forces to apprehend drug law fugitives. The countywide sweep was named Operation WADDLE (Warrant Arrest of Dangerous Drug Law Evaders).

According to Sergeant Bert Foster, who heads up the Lake County Sheriff's Office warrants division, 34 people were arrested on outstanding warrants. Foster said the majority of arrests were drug related, however "if someone was in the wrong place at the wrong time" and was wanted for something other than a drug case, they were arrested also.

"Those arrested during Operation WADDLE have consciously elected to become a fugitive rather than face our legal system of justice," said MEG Director Terry Lemming in

Navy League seeks the service-minded

Members of the Lake County Council of the U.S. Navy League are gearing their Year 2000 program to further their goal of supporting the Navy and attracting new members who share the value of maintaining strong Navy forces.

Acting President Tom Doddington said the Navy League draws its members from all walks of life.

Council members interact with active duty personnel at Great Lakes Naval Training Center, Doddington pointed out. "There's mutual respect," Doddington emphasized.

The Navy League was started by President Theodore Roosevelt whose credo was: "A strong Navy is the most cost effective means of ensuring peace."

The Council announces its programs of service for the coming year.

Farm Bureau makes pitch for Rte. 53 extension

Directors of the Lake County Farm Bureau are directing a letter campaign in support of construction of the Rte. 53 extension northward to the proposed Grayslake bypass of Rte. 120.

The campaign is the strongest effort in favor of the controversial Rte. 53 tollway plan yet conducted by a non-highway construction organization.

President Eric Nielsen asked members to submit endorsement letters before a Thursday, June 7 deadline. The letters will be turned over to the Lake County Transportation Improvement Project.

Farmer Bureau members voiced strong support of the tollway extension in 1998 in a survey conducted by Executive Director Richard Raftis.

In a letter to members, Nielsen indicated that Rte. 53 will be the most economical to build as compared to the major option of adding additional lanes to existing arterials.

He added that most of the needed right-of-way is already purchased.

The Farm Bureau has a history of supporting aggressive economic growth plans and land use planning that maximizes value to land owners.

a written statement.

According to Foster the fugitives, mainly from the eastern portion of Lake County, were arrested based on three types of criteria: those who were charged but didn't show up for court, those who posted bond but didn't show up for further court hearings, and those who were convicted but failed to attend their sentencing hearing.

Foster said this proactive approach to law enforcement is done on a quarterly basis, and sometimes more often if time and manpower permits. Although Operation WADDLE concentrated specifically on drug-related cases, Foster noted that other sweeps will hone in on domestic violence and higher felonies such as aggravated battery, sex-related crimes and attempted murders.

"We concentrate on anything where they (offenders) are a threat to society," explained Foster.

The officers were unable to catch all 55 suspects on the Operation WADDLE list primarily due to discrepancies in address information. Foster pointed out that some of the fugitives had up to four different addresses listed.

"We just hit them all," he said.

The majority of those arrested had warrant charges of unlawful possession of a controlled substance. Some also faced charges for unlawful delivery of a controlled substance.

be technologically feasible and economically reasonable.

"We have very thorough procedures for adopting rules and regulations," said Cross.

Cross declined to comment on the possibility of the county's success if the proposal receives full county board approval this month. However, he did point out that state Representative Susan Garrett (D-Lake Bluff) was successful two years ago in petitioning the IPCB to change compost site setbacks in specific areas including residential, schools and hospitals.

If the IPCB has jurisdiction, based on the county's proposal, Cross said the whole procedure would take between six to eight months, including a minimum of two public hearings. However, if the county's proposal were approved by the IPCB, Cross said the regulations would probably not apply to existing plants at the time of the law's adoption.

A DIGEST OF STORIES MAKING HEADLINES THROUGHOUT OUR REGION

Expanded park stirs controversy

Lindenhurst—Two public meetings were held at the Lindenhurst Park District to gather community input regarding the proposed plans for Phase II development of Engle Memorial and Independence Parks.

Before July 1, the park district will be applying for a matching state grant through OSLAD (Open Space Land Acquisition and Development). This grant will allow more amenities to be built in the expanded park facility, located adjacent to the park district Community Center at 2200 E. Grass Lake Rd. off Federal Pkwy. and Jefferson Dr.

Park District Director Tom Lippert explained there is a symbiotic relationship between the grants and the community's wishes, in that the grant is needed to provide more amenities, while approval of the grant application depends, in part, on the kind and quality of amenities requested.

Some people in the community, primarily those whose property backs up to the park land, object to the inclusion of a skateboard/BMX bike course in the park plan.

According to Lippert and others in the community, the facility would be well-received.

Lippert circulated a survey for residents to complete, expressing their preferences. The results will be forthcoming.

State names oversight board for 116

Round Lake—State Superintendent of Education Glenn W. McGee appointed oversight panel members to assist Round Lake Area School District 116 with financial matters on May 26.

State Superintendent McGee has appointed Marc Spivak, a former school board president, to serve as panel chairman. William L. Thompson, a former Lake County district and regional superintendent, and Joseph Monahan, retired business manager for Niles Township High School in District 219, will also serve as panel members.

For the next three to ten years the group will help local school officials develop an annual financial plan, as well as monitor district accounting methods.

Police seek subject in shooting

Mundelein—The Mundelein Police Department is looking for a suspect in a shooting that occurred May 24.

Alejandro Ramirez, 20, of the 200 block of Oakdale in Mundelein, is sought regarding the incident that took place near the intersection of Linden Ave. and Orchard St.

At approximately 10:15 p.m. officers responded to the area on a report of gun shots. Upon arrival, they interviewed several witnesses who related the driver of a white Cadillac stopped on Linden Ave. and exited the vehicle, leaving three passengers in the car. The subject then pointed a 9mm semi-automatic handgun at them, claiming they were responsible for breaking his windshield with a brick.

The offender then turned and saw another man coming from the other direction. The subject fired his gun several times at the man, who was about 150 feet away.

Police are still looking for Ramirez. An arrest warrant in the amount of $500,000 was obtained on Ramirez for aggravated discharge of a firearm, aggravated unlawful use of a weapon and aggravated assault.

Police said that there is a possibility that the incident was gang-related.

Bus driver ticketed after fatal accident

Grayslake—Following a fatal accident that killed a 22-month-old Grayslake toddler, Jones School Bus Service driver Robin Diaz, 36, of Waukegan, has been charged by Grayslake police with a violation of classification.

Toddler Maggie Anne Gunderson died after she was struck by a school bus, driven by Diaz, backing out of the driveway at her Grayslake home.

Commander Matt McCutcheon said Diaz's school bus permit expired in August 1999. After some research, the Secretary of State's office advised Grayslake Police that Diaz failed to take the re-test to renew the permit. The ticket would result in a $75 fine or a court date, said McCutcheon.

Jones School Bus Service will be charged with a bus offense: allowing a driver to drive on an expired permit, McCutcheon added. Since it is the company's first offense, it could be fined up to $1,000.

Weather woes abide for Chain O' Lakes

Fox Lake—The Chain O' Lakes reopened to no-wake restrictions as of 6 a.m. May 28 from the mouth of the Pistakee Lake to Algonquin Dam. The Chain O' Lakes remained closed to all power boats, according to the Fox Waterway Agency (FWA).

On Monday, the rules were revised by the agency. As of May 31, the joint decision was made to lift the non-motorized boating ban on the Fox River between Pistakee Lake and the Stratton Lock and Dam in McHenry. The Fox River remains closed to all power boating.

The Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) and the U.S. Coast Guard (USCG) decided to lift the closure and non-motorized boating ban on the Chain O' Lakes for Sunday and Monday. The Fox River from the mouth of the Pistakee Lake to the Algonquin Dam, however, remains closed to all power boating due to high water levels and strong currents. Other uses, such as kayaking, canoeing, sail boating, shore fishing and to boating, were allowed. The USCG and the IDNR are the agencies who have jurisdiction on closing the waterway.

Dist. 128 pursuing property

Libertyville—Libertyville High School District 128 officials have passed a resolution authorizing them to purchase property directly across the street from the high school on Rte. 176.

Superintendent David Clough said he could not go into details, as the decision was made in executive session.

The two properties currently being considered consist of a residence and the 92-year-old Fairholm Gardens Nursery. According to Clough, there are no finalized plans as of yet.

"There has not been final action (to purchase the land)," he said. Further negotiations are expected, possibly as soon as the next district board meeting.

Speculation is the property may be used for athletic fields for the students. The school has been using fields at the nearby Brainerd property to accommodate some of the school's teams, and officials are split on whether or not to spend money to improve the land. A task force has been assembled to discuss the feasibility of repairs throughout the Brainerd property.

"That (new athletic fields) is a potential use of that property," Clough said. "The most frequently discussed use would be for some additional playing fields."

Citizens object to Nuemann Home plan

Antioch—Attorney Newton Finn, whose services have been retained by residents Dale and Marian Brandt, read objections into the record at the Plan Commission meeting that laid the foundation for a potential lawsuit against the Village of Antioch.

In addition to objections that the Neumann Homes development would adversely impact nearby property and have a negative impact to sensitive environment, Finn contends that the 1992 settlement under which the village must support the development of the Anest property was dismissed and not actually settled.

After the meeting, Finn expanded on his opposition. He said, "What the village did in negotiating with Anest was set up a PUD, which is a tailor-made plan for future development. There are many steps that must be followed under Antioch ordinance to do this. Antioch has exceeded its lawful powers in not following its own ordinance."

Finn noted that it was important to get everything on the table early so that he, on behalf of his clients, doesn't waive the right to bring these issues up later.

Counterfeiters arrested at GCHS

Grayslake—Grayslake Community High School suspended three students in connection with two counterfeit bills.

Dave Sears, dean at the school, explained that two bills were passed, a $10 bill and a $20 bill. The cafeteria supervisor caught the phony money when counting it.

One of the students was arrested and charged with a juvenile petition for forgery, according to Commander Matt McCutcheon of the Grayslake Police. The 15-year-old Round Lake resident apparently created the phony money on his home computer using a scanner and printer, said McCutcheon.

"I guess the issue is, as the technology advances... I'm sure we'll see more and more of it," McCutcheon commented. "Regular U.S. Currency has a lot of safeguards. It's difficult to reproduce that."

The offender will be tried in juvenile court, where he may be sentenced to community service, probation or time in juvenile detention.

Sex offender arrested for pornography

Gurnee—David Mark Canaday, 38, of Gurnee was arrested on 10 counts of dissemination of child pornography following an investigation executed by the FBI.

The FBI informed local officials that they had been in communication with Canaday via the Internet. Investigators said that on several occasions, Canaday had conducted his communications with an investigator on the Internet Task Force, who posed as a 13-year-old boy. Office had enabled investigators working the case to obtain the search warrant.

Items seized during the execution of the warrant included two computer systems and several diskettes. Some of the discs were said to contain child pornography. The hard drives of the two computers will be checked electronically to determine if they hold additional material that could be construed as child pornography.

Canaday, who was present at his residence during the execution of the search warrant, had been on parole from the Illinois Department of Corrections. He was being monitored for a 1996 aggravated criminal sexual assault. Canaday is a registered sex offender as a result of the 1996 case.

Man arrested for striking police officer

Round Lake—Christopher S. Lentine, 22, of the 300 block of Goodnow Blvd. in Round Lake was arrested after assaulting two Round Lake Police officers.

According to Round Lake Police Chief Charlie Foy, department officials received numerous calls on May 25 about a public disturbance. Around 8 p.m. officers reported to the 500 block of Railroad Ave.

According to Round Lake Police, when officers approached Lentine, he threatened to infect them with the AIDS virus with his blood-covered hands. He then struck each officer as they tried to detain him.

Round Lake Police charged Lentine with two counts of aggravated battery to a police officer. In addition, he was charged with resisting arrest and aggravated assault, police said.

He was later transported to bond court, Foy said.

Allendale fund-raiser a success

Lake Villa—"Seeds of Hope" was the theme of Allendale Association's 18th annual Spring Gala fund-raiser, held at the Glen View Club in Golf.

The event was chaired by trustee Fred Feldman, president and CEO of Aon Risk Services of Latin America.

The evening began with a silent auction, followed by a $195-a-plate dinner, a live auction and dancing.

Initial figures indicate the event raised over $100,000 through corporate sponsorships, live and silent auctions and ticket and raffle sales.

The funds raised will be used for the benefit of children serviced by the non-profit Allendale Association.

Millburn receives 'wall-to-wall' donation

Wadsworth—Millburn School first graders in Kathy Mark's class squeezed together to pose for a picture on their newest prized possession—a brand new carpet.

Thanks to Joseph Zale, of Carpet Castle of Lake Villa, the smiling youths will now be able to spread out comfortably for reading and math activities.

In appreciation of his donation, Superintendent Dr. James Menzer handed Zale a thank you letter on behalf of Millburn School and Mark's first grade class at a small, but worthwhile, gathering.

Zale learned of Mark's need for a carpet when Donna Kenyon, a first-grade parent, came to his store. Kenyon informed Zale that she was searching for a carpet to put in a first-grade classroom. The businessman decided to donate one.

"Schools need as much money as they can get to teach future children," Zale said.

Rain storms close bridge

Gurnee—After an evaluation done by an outside engineering consultant, the Village of Gurnee has decided to close the First St. Bridge because of unsafe conditions.

The bridge, located between Rte. 132 and Ellis Ave., traverses a creek that is a part of the Gurnee tributary.

Assistant Village Engineer Neil Highland said that the village decided to have the bridge evaluated when a large dip developed in the road after heavy rain storms.

The bridge was slated to be replaced during the village's road project that covers First St., Blackstone Ave. and Greenleaf St. Unfortunately, it will not be reopened until it is replaced.

Road rage spurs revised thinking for road needs

On both ends of the Chicago metropolitan area, road rage has taken on a new meaning. Opponents of two well-entrenched major highway extensions are attacking the plans with new zeal, well aware that the gridlocked-weary motoring public is tired of surveys and hidden agenda proposals as opposed to practical solutions to highway transportation needs.

Opponents of the controversial northward extension of Rte. 53 into central Lake County are taking heart that the phalanx of politicians, land promoters and head-strong bureaucracy pushing the project for four decades finally is viewing viable alternatives to the continuation from Lake-Cook Rd. estimated to cost more than $2 billion.

On the southwest side, opponents of the proposed Interstate 355 extension are heartened by new interest in both sides of the debate in authorized plans to expand and improve dozens of Will County roads.

Is there a similarity in the apparent weakening in officialdom's resolve to force the construction of these two questionable highway extensions? We think so.

Leaders of the opposition to I-355, as embodied in the Lincolnway South Corridor Against the Tollway, long have considered the plans as a "hysterical overreaction" to a manageable problem. Despite mounting evidence that adding more toll miles will lead to a stampede of suburban sprawl, municipal leaders have taken a hard line against compromise. Until recently, South Corridor leaders see I-355 supporters in the past as viewing highway needs with tunnel vision.

In Lake County, the narrow focus toward highway transportation needs vested in a single roadway has been similar. Until recently, lately, though, studies have raised the possibility of better utilization of existing corridors and upgrading county roads. Indeed, this expansion of vision is viewed by Rte. 53 opponents as a break-through. Dirk Brown, director of the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, emphasized expanding utilization of existing roads in remarks at a highway transportation seminar at Long Grove in May. A precursor of new thinking?

What's cooling the ardor of politicians and highway bureaucrats toward Rte. 53 is the detached attitude of Gov. George Ryan toward ripping a new highway corridor through the county and his outright opposition to the Illinois Tollway Authority. Without question, Ryan's disinterest is in direct contrast to his predecessors, Govs. James Thompson and James Edgar who supported Rte. 53 in the tradition of Republican leadership's ties with the roadbuilding industry and influential owners of potential right-of-way land.

Hanging over the head of the Rte. 53 plan for years has been the specter of failure to meet federal environmental guidelines. Despite political support and relentless pressure from the highway lobby, it has never been determined whether Rte. 53 could be extended legally because of countless wetlands in the highway corridor.

Overall, support for a duplicative tollway in Lake County has been more a question of land use policy and maintaining a reliable conduit for campaign contributions from the road building industry rather than transportation. The Rte. 53 bandwagon could well be running out of steam.

Historically, Illinois road building has been closely allied with political pump-priming and bolstering the economy through creation of jobs. With virtual full employment in northern Illinois and state coffers spilling over, politically motivated make-work projects no longer are in style. And with campaign finance reform in the limelight, political leaders may be seeing the wisdom of dealing with highway construction companies at arm's length on a legitimate need basis.

Thus, the state's two highest profile highway projects seem to be on the verge of being shoved aside in the name of political practicality and better utilization of existing highway corridors. Refreshingly and somewhat unexpectedly, reason and realistic compromise are finding their way to the center stage in dealing with highway needs.

Perhaps a different kind of road rage finally is taking hold. Nothing wrong with that.

VIEWPOINT

Public's places not user friendly

Is it my imagination or are employees in the civil service, meaning people on public payrolls, becoming less civil? Personal experiences of late seem to support that observation.

Making an inquiry into the procedures for renting a meeting room in a center owned by citizens, I was given the third degree by an overly officious manager hardly old enough to shave who treated me like an alien intruder from outer space.

The young commissar didn't ask for my birth certificate or a personal financial statement—"turn over your papers, please." But he did recite extensive policy procedures ad nauseam. Renting one of the meeting rooms in the public facility fell just short of pledging your first born.

A few days later, because of a conflicting appointment I arrived 16 minutes early for the scheduled preview to unveil for taxpayers a new community swimming pool. "Can't let you in," intoned the stern-faced youth as if he was guarding the outer perimeter of a super secret government installation. At that point, I fully expected some huskies like the Republican Guard of Iraq to shoulder me to the parking lot.

Anyone had occasion to inquire lately at a police department dispatch center? Be ready for a greeting from a grim-faced, stiff-necked matron. Right out of central casting.

Wonder if this is what it's like in Cuba? A chilling thought occurred. Amerika could be raising a generation of budding fascist bullies to guard the gates at our tax-supported facilities.

Had the meeting room been in a private banquet facility, I'm certain the rental would have been finalized quickly with a credit card number and listing a home phone. Owners of a swimming facility owned and operated by private enterprise undoubtedly would have been overjoyed to give a potential customer the VIP treatment whether or not the visitor was ahead of schedule.

What was happening, I decided, is that more and more publicly-owned facilities are becoming private and privately owned places are becoming more public. Make sense? At least, the privately owned places seem to be open and user friendly. Like the public is really welcome.

Law breakers

The office of Regional Supt. of Schools Ed Gonwa is looking with high school administrators to up required Selective Service registration for young men. According to latest figures, four out of 10 teenage males in Lake County are breaking the law by failure to register.

Reagan premier

Always happy to be of service. A reader inquired about the name of the movie that previewed at Liberty Theater, Libertyville, starring Ronald Reagan. It was "Dangerous Journey" and thanks for asking. The film was a World War II pot boiler produced to hype war bond sales.

Race charge

Members of the Illinois Police Chiefs Assn. are doing their best to deflect allegations that enforcement of the seatbelt law is racially motivated. That's a stretch, but lawmen say that charge is making the rounds in minority groups. The Illinois Seat Belt law is color blind and costs violators $75.

Fest challenge

With many towns in the county now sponsoring summer "tastes" events, competition is fierce to attain individuality and prominence. Dee Dee Palmer, co-chair, reported how the Antioch Chamber of Commerce and Industry has solved the dilemma. This year Antioch's celebration of food and fun has been renamed MegaFest. Who's going to top a mega event?

Expanding skills

Allendale School is committing $500,000 to enhance vocational education at its Lake Villa campus. Aim of the century-old institution is to advance employable skills for young people in such fields as building trades, automotive and computers. Allendale has a national reputation for helping at risk children.

Tobacco settlement money—A new slush fund?

In January, I wrote here that attorneys across the country will be collecting substantial fees helping attorneys general who filed the class-action law suit against tobacco companies. The legal settlement will also bring a total of $9.1 billion dollars for Illinois over the next 25 years. The funds that states will receive annually is contingent on the number of cigarettes sold.

The whole gist of the law suit filed by 46 attorneys general was that tobacco smoking has caused serious health problems to smokers, and even to non-smokers. Because of the health-related problems caused by tobacco, the companies should be liable huge sums of monies for the illnesses caused and should pay for smoking prevention programs, medical research, and other public health-related programs.

The legislature held hearings around the state to find out how best to spend the "tobacco windfall." The vast majority responded that we should follow the intent of the class-action law suit and use the funds mainly for public health matters and

PARTY LINES

PARTY LINES, THE LAKELAND NEWSPAPERS' COLUMN OF POLITICAL OPINION, IS PREPARED FROM STAFF REPORTS.

Crane challenger tests campaign themes

Lance Pressl, 42, a likable Rolling Meadows resident, is field testing campaign themes he can use to oust veteran Republican Congressman Phil Crane (8th-Ill.)

So far the Democratic newcomer has come up with the gun control issue, never before raised in the 8th District politics in the conservative district of west Lake County and the Schaumburg-Arlington Heights area of northwest Cook County, and his belief that Crane no longer reflects the thinking of 8th District voters.

Gun control is an open end issue in the 8th District, but Crane has chalked up more than two decades of victories over both Democratic and GOP primary challengers who ran on platforms that the Wauconda resident "is out of touch with his constituents."

Besides offering a Ph.D from Northwestern as his credentials, Pressl served three years as president of The Chicago Civic Federation, a policy organization with a special interest in government spending.

On that topic, Crane has a well established record of being one of the most tight-fisted members in Congress.

Dream cruise

Friends and supporters are still talking about a dream group cruise atty. John Ridgeway staged to celebrate his wife's 40th birthday and erase the disappointment of an unsuccessful bid for a Republican nomination for a circuit judgeship. The conservative attorney from Lake Zurich is non-committal about making another race.

Stepping lively

Lt. Gov. Corinne Wood proved

Crane: Will face stiff competition next election

Wood: Can be in two places at once—almost that an elected official can be in two places at the same time—almost. Wednesday, May 24, the Lt. Gov. showed up at a fund-raiser at Deerpath Inn, Lake Forest, for Greg Kazarian and also put in an appearance at a party at Highland Park Country Club honoring Nancy Flouret.

Both Kazarian and Flouret face heavy-sledding in the fall election. Kazarian is trying to unseat popular State Sen. Terry Link (D-Vernon Hills) and Flouret is running in the heavily Democratic 60th state legislative district now represented by Lauren Beth Gash (D-Highland Park).

Watts in town

Congressman J.C. Watts of Oklahoma rallied Republican faithful Tuesday in Lake Bluff on behalf of Mark Steven Kirk, GOP nominee for Congress from the 10th District. Watts is the only African American Republican in Congress. Ambassador Robinson opened his home for the mid-day gathering.

Rare Democrat

Jack Cervac of Libertyville is a rarity in politics—a conservative Democrat. Normally staying active by writing letters to the editor on local tax issues, Cervac now is doing something he's done before, running against veteran GOP County Board Rep. John Schullen (R-Libertyville). The retired ironworker ran unsuccessfully against Schullen eight years ago.

Leafblad correct

Taking on two challengers successfully in the Republican primary, incumbent County Board Rep. Larry Leafblad (R-Highland Lake) figured he'd have opposition in the November general election despite the fact Democrats didn't field a primary candidate. Leafblad was correct. Kenneth Schnur, 41, who is in the painting and decorating business, has become eligible to run through the petitioning process as the Democratic candidate in the mid-county district. Schnur also is a village trustee in Round Lake Park.

Look who's invited to be in 'Who's Who'

Regular visitors to this corner may recall I have long lamented that it seems all of my old school-days friends are in "Who's Who" while I'm still in "Who's He?"

My college roommate, Neil Webb, became president of colleges in Wisconsin and California.

My best pal in journalism school, Jack Casserly, has written Barry Goldwater's biography and other books.

An old high school friend, Lloyd Ogilvie, became a famous television preacher as a minister to Hollywood stars. Now he's the chaplain of the United States Senate.

I could go on but I have been interrupted by something that came in the mail, addressed to my wife, Janice.

It's from the International Who's Who of Professionals. They want to include her in their prestigious publication.

She's a bookkeeper and very good at her job. And, hey, she's a high school graduate of Green Bay East High School.

The president of this particular "Who's Who" writes to her: "As a highly respected professional in your field, and as a result of studies of millions of professionals, we believe your achievements merit very serious consideration for inclusion."

How did they find out about Janice, hidden here in Lakeland? The letter says, "Via an anonymous referral from an existing member."

It's disturbing enough that I can't keep up with my old buddies or the Joneses, but how do I cope when my own wife leaves me in the dust?

It was Lady Nancy Astor who said, "I married beneath me. All women do."

Was there ever any doubt?

There are hundreds of Who's Who directories; to name a few: Who's Who in Music, in Art, in Fashion, in Politics, in Science and Engineering.

THE PFARR CORNER

Jerry Pfarr

I suspect many of them are about making money. After the publishers list your name in their pompous publication, they figure you may want to buy a copy, like for $50 maybe. In fact, you might want to buy several copies and send them to family members, friends and others you might wish to impress.

There also are membership dues and other costs of taking this ego trip.

Janice isn't going to bother to fill out the application, even though she's as good a "Who's Who" as any "Who's Who" alive.

By the way, there's a directory titled "Who's Who in Hell," listing those in history who appeared headed there. And there's even a "Who's Who of Losers."

(Whoa, what if I should get an invitation to be in that book? I think I'd like to change the subject now.)

Get a life?

Here's a rule to live by: "Don't hold grudges. While you're holding the grudge the other guy is out dancing."

A classic example of that maxim appeared in the news recently. A story from Miami reported that a mammoth mob—tens of thousands—of Cuban-Americans marched through Miami's Little Havana protesting the raid in which armed federal agents took 6-year-old Elian Gonzalez from the home of relatives.

While the demonstrators chanted and carried signs denouncing our government, 15 miles north of Miami federal agents were having a picnic to celebrate the success of their operation which reunited Elian and his father.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Durbin: Reconsider nuclear waste decision

Sen. Richard J. Durbin (D-Illinois) recently voted against legislation that would help Illinois rid itself of thousands of tons of nuclear waste. Because Illinois has more nuclear waste stored in its borders than any other state, Sen. Durbin should strongly reconsider his vote.

Sen. Durbin voted to uphold President Clinton's veto of S.1287, the Nuclear Waste Policy Amendment Act of 2000. Nuclear waste in Illinois is onsite at 11 nuclear power plants throughout the state. Illinois has the most nuclear waste in the nation—in excess of 5,000 tons or 15 percent of the U.S. total. S.1287 would have ensured that the waste be stored at a central repository in a remote location in a more timely manner.

In 1982 Congress required the U.S. Dept. of Energy to manage used nuclear fuel at a central disposal facility no later than Jan. 31, 1998. Since that time, Illinois consumers have paid more than $2 billion into a trust fund established to finance the new storage project. Yet, the deadline has long passed without any meaningful progress by the Energy Department to meet this obligation to begin consolidating the nuclear fuel. The fund now totals over $16 billion. Yet, DOE has no plan to meet its 1998 deadline before 2010, at the earliest.

This year, bipartisan majorities in Congress voted to help correct the waste storage problems with the Nuclear Waste Policy Amendments Act. Congressional leaders met President Clinton's concerns by streamlining S.1287 and crafting provisions that will put the government's nuclear waste program on a clear schedule and firm budget and move the Yucca Mountain repository project forward. Yet, President Clinton still vetoed the legislation. On May 2, the Senate came within one vote of overriding the President's veto. Sen. Durbin could have made the difference.

If a new vote occurs on S.1287, Sen. Durbin should rethink his position and vote in favor of the Nuclear Waste Policy Amendments Act.

No tollway

A few things to consider when pondering the information presented by the Lake County Transportation Improvement Project (LC-TIP).

LC-TIP is purporting that the Route 53 project will cost significantly less to build than the local-road improvement alternative. However, in the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority report to Governor Ryan regarding new-build tollway costs projections, the cost of 53 far exceeds that of the non-53 alternative. So who is getting the accurate cost projection, the governor or the residents of Lake County? Or should I say, who isn't?

Although traffic congestion is going to continue to worsen as our population grows, the local-road improvement and build-53 alternatives provide the same amount of traffic congestion relief. This fact was established last year at the LC-TIP meetings, yet some still have a hard time grasping it.

Significant growth is coming to Lake County with or without 53. Everyone agrees on this point as well. LC-TIP admits that 53 would be responsible for a portion of added growth, up to 27,000 more residents.

particularly for programs to prevent smoking. Even Gov. George Ryan gave a sort of "read my lips" statement that he wanted the tobacco money used for "health care."

But, this is an election year. Both political parties were sparring over which would provide the most tax relief for the beleaguered taxpayers. Isn't it ironic that the $350 million Big Game jackpot split by the two winners in the multi-state lottery is the same amount—$350 million dollars—to be split in tax relief this year, primarily to homeowners? So, all of that $350 million dollars in tax relief is coming from, guess where, the tobacco law suit settlement money. Another big surprise. Guess when property owners will receive that one-time 5 percent property tax rebate capped at $300? You'll receive the check a month or so before the November election. How's that for timing?

I guess that taxpayers are happy to receive a tax break, no matter where it comes from, but the whole thing is gimmicky. In fact, after the legislature adjourned, many legislators were surprised to learn that their budget contained many other items funded by the tobacco settlement money.

State Comptroller Dan Hynes reviewed the $49 billion dollar budget and listed a total of 41 construction projects that amounted to over $27 million dollars, all paid with the "tobacco money." Things like paying for a back-up generator at the Old State Capitol, new equipment at a state fish hatchery, constructing parking lots, demolishing buildings, "minor" repairs statewide totaling $4 million, and the list goes on. None of the 41 projects have anything remotely to do with public health, let alone, smoking-related. The "budgeteers" could have been just as gimmicky and paid for these projects out of "Illinois First" funds.

At a time when the state appears to be rolling in surplus funds due to the "good times," it does seem to me that using the tobacco settlement money to pass around these "goodies" is both ridiculous and at cross purposes over what the suit against tobacco companies was all about. Attorney General Jim Ryan was as critical as Comptroller Hynes on using the tobacco settlement funds to "plug budget holes."

I'm sure that what happened this year will be repeated in the future. The decision was made, of course, behind closed doors by the governor, and the four legislative leaders, often called the "four tops." Much has been said about the "real pit" tossed at Gov. Ryan at his first "roundtable discussion." I'm more concerned about how the "Big Five" split up the "budget pit," and the rank-and-file legislators, and the citizens have to "swallow it," like it or not.

Lessons from corporations' annual reports

For more than a decade I've been reading the annual reports of several major corporations. With thoughtful analysis and a little reading between the lines you can learn a lot about business operation, corporate culture and management philosophy.

This year as the statements started to come in, I was intrigued by the contrast of the top executives' comments in two of the annual reports. Floyd Hall of Kmart and David Glass of Wal-Mart took very different approaches to communicating the past year's success to shareholders.

However, you must read between the lines to grasp the contrast. On the surface, both men's comments sound positive and upbeat. Both used the terms "continuous improvement," "innovation" and "change." Both executives discussed their company's success and lauded the commitment of their management teams.

So where is the contrast you ask? The contrast is in the execution. Many are good at talking about success; few are truly talented at getting the job done.

A history lesson

Let's roll back the calendar a few years to 1990. It was during this dramatic year that a new retail sales leader emerged. Long-time leader, Sears, Roebuck and Company, was passed by the up-and-coming Kmart Corporation.

The big shock was that Wal-Mart Stores Inc. swept by both Sears and Kmart with a sales surge of 26 percent. Wal-Mart's sales for the fiscal year that ended in January 1991 were nearly $33 billion.

And therein lies the basis of the contrast. In the decade that followed, Wal-Mart executed while the other two powerful retailers—Sears and Kmart—languished. While Sears and Kmart talked about continuous improvement and made only small advances, Wal-Mart made giant strides toward serving customers more effectively. While Sears and Kmart revised, revamped and tried new approaches, Wal-Mart continued to execute their skillfully crafted plan.

The proof is in the year-to-year results these companies have achieved. In fiscal year 2000 Kmart rang up retail sales of $35.9 billion, Sears came in at $41 billion and Wal-Mart became the second largest company in the US with sales exceeding $165 billion.

Now keep in mind that all three of these giant retailers were at nearly the same sales levels in 1990. All had the same economy to grow in and all had the same buying clout. All three companies had hundreds of stores and were present in virtually all major US markets. How did Wal-Mart grow to be four times the size of Sears and four and a half times the size of Kmart?

The difference

Here are the key lessons I've learned from the annual reports. I believe they spell out the performance differences.

- Do more with less. Wal-Mart has always held expenses in check. They focused on taking cost out of the business in all areas. Of all the annual reports I received this year, the company

CDW will split stock on June 21

2-for-1 common dividend comes 14 months after last stock split

CDW Computer Centers Inc. has announced that the CDW Board of Directors has declared a 2-for-1 stock split of its common stock, to be effected in the form of a common stock dividend payable on June 21, to shareholders of record at the close of business on June 14. One additional share of CDW common stock will be distributed for each of the currently outstanding shares. The stock split will increase the number of shares currently issued and outstanding from about 43.6 million shares to about 87 million shares, and it will increase CDW's public float from about 22.7 million shares to about 45.4 million shares.

At the company's annual shareholder meeting, CDW's shareholders approved an amendment to the company's articles of incorporation to increase the number of authorized shares of common stock to 500 million.

"(The) stock split reflects CDW's continuing record of superior financial results, market share gains and stock price appreciation," said Michael Krasny, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. "Just as with our last stock split on May 19, 1999, our objective is to enhance the trading liquidity of our stock, which may allow more investors to participate in the investment opportunity that CDW offers."

Vernon Hills-based CDW is a FORTUNE 1,000 company, is a leading direct provider of computer hardware and software, offering complete, customized computing solutions for businesses and consumers nationwide. Founded in 1984 as a one-man, home-based business, CDW now employs more than 2,000 coworkers.

Businessman finalist in annual competition

A Bannockburn business leader has been named a finalist in Ernst & Young's 2000 Illinois/Northwest Indiana Entrepreneur of the Year awards competition.

Michael A. Rusnak, president & CEO of Option Care Inc., was chosen by a distinguished panel of judges as a finalist in the Service Entrepreneur of the Year category. Option Care provides alternate site (away for the doctor's office) and high-tech pharmaceutical services through a nationwide franchise network.

The finalists vying in eight categories are 41 area business leaders representing 33 companies. They include 15 from the city of Chicago, 23 from surrounding suburbs in Cook, DuPage and Lake Counties, one from Moline, one near Savoy (near Champaign-Urbana) and one from Hobart, Ind. Almost half the finalist companies are in the technology, software and e-business-related industries. Other businesses range from catalytic converters to industrial screws, from sugar-free foods to bakery items and from televisions and VCRs to floor coverings.

The 14-year-old Entrepreneur of the Year award program honors entrepreneurs who have demonstrated excellence and extraordinary success in such areas as innovation, financial performance and personal commitment to their businesses and communities. The program has grown to include 46 United States markets and 21 foreign countries.

"Many factors come into play as the judges choose the finalist from an outstanding field of candidates," said Mark R. Williams, Ernst & Young's director of entrepreneurial services for this area. "Financial growth, success against long odds and the 'story' behind the entrepreneur's success are just some of the factors."

Wood, DCCA announce grants for Main Street communities web pages

Illinois Main Street communities are getting a link to the future through a joint effort by Lt. Governor Corinne Wood and the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs (DCCA) to assist with the development and the enhancement of web pages.

Each Illinois Main Street community will receive a $1,000 mini-grant from the Lieutenant Governor's office, which is being matched with $1,000 from DCCA. Lt. Governor Wood announced the "Download Downtown" program at the Illinois Main Street Awards Dinner.

"This partnership grant offers an exciting opportunity for our Main Street communities to create or expand their presence on the World Wide Web," Wood said. "As local teams across our state work to reinvigorate their downtown areas, it is only appropriate that the 'Download Downtown' program help them more effectively market their communities using the latest technologies."

The grants are an extension of Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs Bureau of Tourism's "Right Here, Right Now" campaign. In the near future, all the Illinois Main Street web pages will be linked to the Lieutenant Governor's and DCCA's web pages.

The grant money can be used to promote local Main Street activities, to market local tourism opportunities, to communicate between Main Street communities on an up-to-minute basis, to provide a virtual tour of the downtown, to serve as an economic tool for local businesses, to share educational resources on a local, state, national and international levels and to serve as a promotional tool for the entire Illinois Main Street program.

Tender battle looming for Cherry Corp.

Waukegan-based Cherry Corp. has announced that it has received a proposal from another company for the acquisition of the company for $26.00 per share in cash.

The offer comes as a Special Committee of the company's Board of Directors is considering a proposal from Peter Cherry and several trusts under his control, for the acquisition of the outstanding common stock not now owned by Cherry and the affiliates for $18.75 per share in cash.

Cherry, combined with his affiliates, currently owns about 54 percent of all outstanding Cherry common stock and have previously advised The Cherry Corp. board that they were not interested in selling their interests in the company to a third party. Peter Cherry is the Chairman and President of The Cherry Corp.

The Special Committee is studying the new proposal, which is subject to various conditions including a due diligence review, the unanimous recommendation of The Cherry Corp. Board and the acceptance of the tender offer by shareholders, including Peter Cherry and his affiliates. The committee has forwarded a copy of the proposal to Cherry.

According to a company statement, there can be no assurance that the existing Cherry proposal, the new proposal or any transaction will be consummated.

In early April, the company announced that the Special Committee had engaged Wasserstein Perella & Co. Inc., as independent financial advisor to assist it in evaluating the proposal.

After Peter Cherry made his intentions known, four class action lawsuits were filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware, alleging breach of fiduciary duties on the part of the directors of the company in connection with Peter Cherry's proposal to buy the outstanding shares.

On May 9, another class action suit was filed in Delaware Chancery Court. The statement said the company believes the suits—which also seek injunctions to stop Cherry from buying the outstanding shares—are premature and without merit.

Peter Cherry's proposal was first announced April 24. Cherry and his affiliates now own about 5.5 million shares.

The company has struggled financially lately. It announced sales and earnings for its fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Feb. 29. The results of the Company's semiconductor operation, which was earlier sold to ON Semiconductor, is reflected as a discontinued operation.

For the Company's continuing operations, sales for the year were $360 million, up slightly from last year. Sales for the fourth quarter were $83.9 million, down 2.1 percent from last year's level.

For the year, net earnings from continuing operations were $5.8 million, down 57.9 percent from a year earlier. For the fourth quarter, continuing operations reported a net loss of $306,000 compared to net earnings of $1.9 million from the prior year. Including the results of discontinued operations, net earnings for the year were $12.25 million, a decrease of 35 percent from the prior year while net earnings for the quarter were $2.8 million, an increase of about 1 percent.

The fourth quarter continued to be negatively affected by the operational problems with the North American automotive division that started in the third quarter of fiscal 2000. In addition the North American switches and controls business continued to be negatively affected by the delay in the launch of a major new custom electronic

"We are disappointed with our North American performance and quite satisfied with our European performance," said Cherry at the time.

• Focus on improvement instead of growth. Wal-Mart has always been motivated by the idea of getting better, not getting bigger. Serve your customers well and growth will come naturally.

• Develop a team of dedicated people. Several Wall Street experts predicted a period of decline following Sam Walton's death in 1992. The decline never came because Walton built a talented, dedicated team, prepared them well and empowered them to work the plan.

• Never resist change. Wal-Mart has only had three CEOs in its 38 year history: Sam Walton, David Glass and newly appointed Lee Scott. Walton and Glass pushed for changes that made the company better. I'll bet Scott will continue in the same way. You can't compete with the companies of yesterday because they are different today. MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

by Gary S. Meyers

A CAUTION ON REFINANCING OFFERS: THINGS AREN'T ALWAYS WHAT THEY SEEM

Pete Taglia is angry and he knows there is not much he can do about the situation.

Taglia, vice president and manager of the Home Loan Center for Northern Trust Company in Chicago, has seen an upsurge in what he believes are shady practices. Some Northern Trust mortgage customers have received letters referencing their loan amounts and parcel numbers, asking them to contact another company about refinancing.

"It looks like we sold our list and we didn't," Taglia said.

The companies take the information off public documents available in county recorders' offices. It's all quite legal, except it looks bad.

"If these companies would say they got the information off of public documents, that would be all right, but they don't," Taglia said.

Instead Northern Trust's name is prominently displayed in one or more places on the document. Angry customers then contact the bank. In the last 30 days four of these complaints have been serious enough to go to senior management. Most people understand once Taglia explains, but he wonders how many never ask and go on believing their privacy has been violated.

In fact, only the loan amount, legal description of the property and the parcel number are available through public records. Information such as the interest rate and credit report are not, and it is illegal to disclose that information to a third party without the borrower's permission, Taglia said.

"Institutions like ours that have built a reputation on privacy are most upset," Taglia said.

If you get such a letter, Taglia recommends that you contact your lender.

Questions from readers:

Q. I am planning to refinance my home. Yesterday a broker pulled my credit report. I would like to contact several brokers so that I will be able to compare rates. My question is whether or not I will lower my credit score if there are additional inquiries.

A. "You want to avoid unnecessary inquiries, if you can," said Kim Presley, assistant manager of the Bank of Northern Illinois. "Every inquiry takes an average of 10 points off your credit score and it is not restored for 90 days."

You have the right to a free copy for 30 days after the first report is pulled. Contact the broker and ask him or her which agency was used, then contact that agency. Presley suggests that you then take that copy to other brokers when you shop around.

Note from Gary Meyers: Remember that rates are only part of the picture. When you are mortgage shopping, look at products and services, too

Beyond the birds and bees: Talking to your kids about AIDS/HIV, STDs and unintended pregnancy

The Illinois Department of Public Health has developed a statewide campaign to raise awareness of AIDS/HIV, sexually transmitted diseases and unintended pregnancy among adolescents. Talking about sex, diseases and pregnancy to teenagers is not an easy or comfortable task, but it is an important one. Teenagers today are growing up faster than ever before and, consequently, parents need to maintain an open dialogue with their children.

Here are some tips for parents tackling the subject of sex and its consequences in an effective and comfortable manner:

- Really get to know your child.
- As children go through emotional and physical changes, it is important to try to understand what is happening in their lives.
- Frequently ask your kids what they are thinking and how they are feeling.
- Begin with a comfortable subject.

- Breaking the ice can be a challenge. Use events from everyday life, whether it be their friends or your own experience. Begin by discussing these situations and then steer the conversation to personal issues.
- Share experiences.
- It is helpful to give examples or stories because children have difficulty grasping some information. Relate an experience you had growing up.

• Listen to your child.

- Stop whatever you are doing to focus your attention and listen to your child. Make eye contact. Acknowledge what your child is saying to show that you understand and, if you don't understand, ask for clarification.
- To confidentially speak to someone about communicating with your child about AIDS/HIV, STDs and unintended pregnancy, call the Illinois AIDS/HIV and STD Hotline at 1-800-243-2437.

Can't afford your prescription medication? Free prescription medicine is available to those who qualify

The Patient Assistance Network helps people to apply for enrollment in one of more of the many patient assistance programs now available. This process is accomplished with the cooperation of the applicant's physician. The majority of these programs provide prescription medication free of charge to individuals in need regardless of age, if they meet the sponsor's criteria.

Some of the primary requirements for the applicant to qualify are as follows:

- The applicant does not have insurance coverage for outpatient prescription drugs.
- The applicant's income is at a level which causes a hardship when the patient is required to purchase the medication at retail.

• The applicant does not qualify for a government or third party program which provides for prescription medications.

To be accepted into a patient assistance program, the applicant's income must fall within the limits established by his or her particular sponsors. The household income limit requirement varies with each manufacturer. Decisions concerning which medications are provided free of charge and which individuals are accepted into the program are made solely by the various program sponsors.

Each manufacturer has established specific criteria to determine an applicant's eligibility.

The funds necessary to support the Patient Assistance Program and distribute these prescription drug information packets are provided by the $5 processing fee contributed by the applicants.

The Patient Assistance Network guarantees full processing fee refund upon written request to any applicant who is determined to be ineligible for assistance by all applicable manufacturer assistance programs and therefore receives no medications. Although the Patient Assistance Network can not guarantee your approval, if the patient believes that they may qualify to participate, the Patient Assistance Network will be diligent in their efforts to assist the patient.

To get a customized drug information packet, write a letter with the following information: The name, address and phone number of the person taking the medication; the name of the medications; The name and address of the physician. Include $5 for each medication to: Patient Assistance Network-Customized Prescription Drug Information, Dept. CPDI-0430-P.O. Box 60382, Washington, DC 20039-0382.

Hernia can be life-threatening, surgery only viable cure

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have a hernia on the right side. I am a senior citizen and have had the hernia for at least 10 years. Is it life-threatening if left alone? Does the hernia get larger? — A.R.

ANSWER: In a groin hernia, peritoneum bulges through a weakness of the lower abdominal wall. Peritoneum is a cellophane wrap that drapes itself over abdominal organs. Often in a groin hernia, part of the intestine protrudes through the weak spot along with the peritoneum.

Hernias tend to enlarge with time. Surgery is the only hernia cure.

Hernias threaten life if the blood supply to the bulging intestine is cut off. The intestinal section dies and spreads germs throughout the abdomen. This event causes great pain, and there is no doubt in a person's mind that something is drastically wrong. Prompt delivery to a hospital and operating room generally save lives.

The Hernia Health Letter offers more details on these common anatomical quirks. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — HL 36-3W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents), No. 10 envelope and $3. Please allow 612 weeks for delivery.

Dear Dr. Donohue: an ultrasound picture shows I have a "fatty liver." My blood test shows a rise in my liver count to 144. My doctor gives no explanation. I am worried. What is a fatty liver, and what should the liver count be? — J.M.

ANSWER: Since the arrival of ultrasound pictures, fatty liver has proven to be a fairly common finding. Prior to ultrasound pictures,

TO YOUR HEALTH

people never knew they had the condition.

Fat invades the liver and disrupts some liver cells. The damaged cells release enzymes into the blood. A rise in those liver enzymes is your "liver count." AST and ALT are the two liver enzymes released into the blood. Normal values are roughly under 40 for both.

Obesity causes fat invasion of the liver. Weight reduction removes it. Diabetes is another common cause for fatty liver. Diabetic control keeps matters in check.

In many instances, doctors cannot find a cause.

A low-fat diet together with exercise can sometimes remove liver fat. Most people suffer no grave consequences from having a lightly fatty liver. In a minority, liver cell damage progresses to liver cirrhosis.

Watch what you eat. Don't drink alcohol. Have the tests repeated and the doctor will take it from there.

I didn't mention alcohol as a cause yet. It is the chief cause of fatty livers. However, in people such as yourself, the condition is called nonalcoholic fatty liver because alcohol did not have a hand in its appearance.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Should we stay together for the kids?

Hi Dr. Singer,

My husband and I have been having marital problems for a long time. We have pretty much decided that a divorce would be the best decision for us, but we keep putting things off because we have kids. Our battles are very obvious, even though we try to keep a lid on it. The kids can feel the stress between us and in the household. We wondered what your opinion is about staying together for the kid's sake? F.L.

Dear F.L.,
I'm very sorry for your difficult situation. My first advice to you is that this is not the kind of thing that should be handled in a column. This needs counseling. If you still want my opinion on your specific situation, you can re-call and set up a personal consult and I will help you. Other than that, I will tell you about some other situations I have seen, but please understand that I do not know enough about your specific situation to give you direct advice and a specific decision. I will tell you that the sooner you get into counseling about this, the sooner you will get control over your overt battles and be able to reduce the stress in the home for your kids.

PARENT'S PLACE

Dr. Sherri Singer

This is something you have to do.

In my opinion, kid's adjustment to parental problems is more a function of the level of open and overt stress, than the actual situation between the parents. Kids may not even know all the details, but if they sense a lot of stress or danger, it will effect their well-being sometimes in a disastrous way.

I have seen it both ways. Situations in which the parents stay together for the kids and those who divorce and take their chances. In families where there has been a ton of open conflict and screaming, after separation, parents have reported that their kid's stress level has gone down. In that situation, the lower stress level is obviously due to less open conflict. The true question here is whether a divorce needs to occur to manage conflict? Now, in other situations, kids are paralyzed with fear at the concept of their parents getting a divorce and the stress goes up. Again, I will say that the underlying reason that a child does better or worse from a divorce is whether the conflict goes up afterwards or down. If the conflict dissipates and the child still has access to both parents, adjustment can be better.

Having access to both parents is another very important part here. The less the disruption, the better for the child. Of course, in the event of a divorce, parents live in separate places, but once the child understands that he or she can see the other parent when needed, they eventually become more secure with that and stress goes down. Keep in mind that if you are in any way using your child as a pawn against your spouse, your behavior will result in some very uncomfortable conclusions. Kids that feel unsafe and bounced around when young, will turn around when older and make you feel unsafe and bounced around. Think about this when you try and get that child to side with you against the other parent. This happens far too often and should not.

So, I cannot recommend what you should or should not do in terms of whether to get divorced or not. Divorce is a very personal decision and has to be between the couple. If you feel that your children would benefit from a reduction in "combat," you need to make one decision. That decision may be counseling. If you feel that your children would be completely traumatized by a separation, then you know your decision needs to go another way. You need to do what is in the best interest of your children and not yourself. Try to take a few steps back to be sure your decisions are for them and not disguised for you. Who's right and who's wrong should not be the 1st priority. Trying to make life as "bumpless" as possible for your kids is what really counts. Remember to call me if you want to do counseling (which I think you should NOW!) If not me, call someone for that help.

Dr. Sherri Singer is a Licensed Clinical Psychologist and Childhood Behavior Specialist. She regularly works in person with many readers of this column. She is the author of, "Why Kids Misbehave" and "Raising Kids Who Don't Become Your Worst Nightmare." For an appointment or to purchase either of Dr. Singer's books, please call (847) 577-8832 or (708) 962-2549.

Healthy soil for vigorous gardens

Good, healthy soil provides plants with the right amount of nutrients, water and air to thrive. Understanding the characteristics of soil will help you improve your soils' health and the overall health of your garden. One indicator of healthy soil is the number of earthworms it supports. When a lot of organic matter is present, earthworms abound. Healthy soil also is bursting with microorganisms breaking down organic matter into a usable form by plants. But that's difficult to see.

"Know your soil," recommends Julian Wesley, botanical supervisor for Boerner Botanical Gardens, Hales Corners, Wis. "Have your soil tested for the pH and levels of nitrogen, potassium and phosphorus."

You can determine the quality of your soil with some simple tests that indicate its structure, pH level and fertility. Armed with these basics, you can amend the soil appropriately and look forward to producing beautiful plants and flowers and a bountiful vegetable garden.

Soil Structure

Soil structure is determined by the amount of sand, silt, clay and organic matter it contains. The size and characteristic of each particle affects the soil's ability to hold air, water and nutrients. Humus is the organic component of soil. It is the remains of once-living organisms, mostly plants. The ideal soil for gardening contains a mixture of all four items. Sand, the largest particle, allows air and water to infiltrate the soil and drain well. But sandy soils also lack the ability to hold moisture and nutrients. As a result, they tend to dry out quickly and require more fertilization.

Silty soils usually occur in flood plains and readily hold water. When dry, these soils become powdery and difficult to rewet. Silty soils hold more nutrients and water than sandy ones.

Clayey soils readily retain water and are easily compacted. Clay soils require more time to dry out in spring and may puddle. These soils also easily hold most nutrients. The addition of organic matter will generally improve poor soils. Organic matter improves sandy soils by retaining moisture and nutrients, and improves the drainage and aeration of silty and clayey soils.

"Add lots of compost," recommends home gardener, Ruth Alt, Glendale, Wis. "And use mulch that will decompose into compost. But don't forget to replace the nitrogen, which is drawn out of the soil by the decomposing mulch."

Natural organic fertilizers, which come from biological materials, provide organic matter as well as nutrients to soil, including the nitrogen lost to decomposing mulch. Milorganite, for example, is a natural organic fertilizer that contains a high amount of organic matter - up to 40 percent carbon. "It serves as a fertilizer and soil conditioner with its high organic matter content," explains

SOIL

Mike Archer, market development and research coordinator at Milorganite. "It's especially good for high clay and sandy soils." Proper pH

"The most important thing to do when you begin gardening is to test and then amend the soil to bring it up to the proper pH level," recommends Alt.

A soil's pH value indicates the acid or alkaline level and can affect the availability of some nutrients to plants. The ideal pH level for fertile soil is 7.0, which is considered neutral. For most edible plants, a pH range of 5.5 to 7.5 is good. Amendments can be added to bring the soil closer to neutral, but organic matter, especially compost, tends to neutralize soil over time.

To test the pH of your soil, use a do-it-yourself pH kit available at garden centers, or send a soil sample to your local county extension agent. Home kits also may test fertility by measuring the relative amount of nitrogen, potassium and phosphorus. University extension laboratories will test soil for a small fee and may provide a more extensive analysis and recommendations. A soil's pH can change over time and should be checked every three to four years.

Fertility

How well soil supports plant life determines its fertility. Three basic nutrients are essential to plants: nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium.

"Nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are the most critical nutrients for optimum plant growth," explains Archer. "They are often the most limiting nutrients in most soil." Additional micronutrients also are essential for proper plant growth, but only in small amounts.

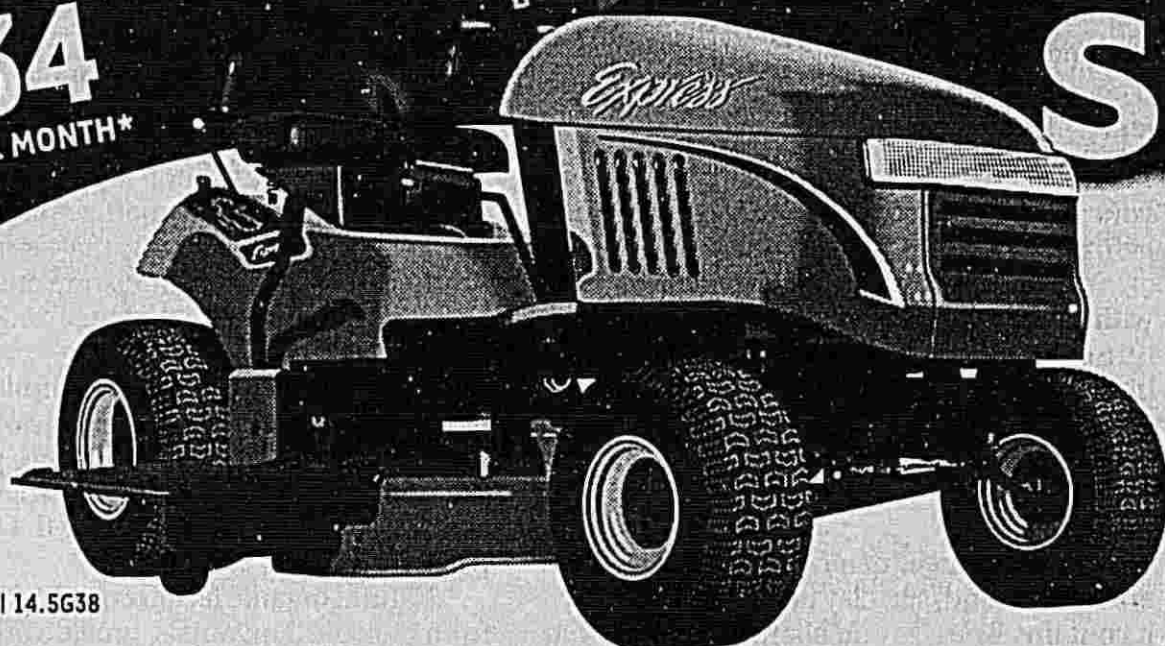

There are many benefits to natural organic fertilizers, like Milorganite, that home gardeners will certainly appreciate. But Lukaszewski puts it best, "You can't mess up with Milorganite." How can you dispute someone who used this natural organic fertilizer to grow 100 varieties of tomatoes last season - a total of 1,000 tomato plants?

DETECTIVE

sonality testing which subsequently paired him with Comet. As a team, Gabes and Comet went through a highly specialized and very intensive 10-week training program that ended with a May graduation.

The daily training included exposure to and practical experience with detecting explosives in selected locations such as airports, schools, buses, aircraft and trains. In order to receive ATF certification Comet was required to identify, with 100 percent accuracy, no less than 20 types of explosive compounds including ammonium nitrate, TNT, dynamite, black powder, firearms and fireworks.

Del Re anticipates that the EDCT will be used primarily for bomb threat calls involving the need to conduct a bomb search, and for search warrants where firearms, explosive booby traps or other such explosive devices may be encountered.

According to statistics by the Illinois Law Enforcement Training and Standards Board, a total of 264 bombing incidents occurred in Illinois in 1996. These figures rank Illinois second only to California which had 496 incidents.

Del Re noted that the team will be used for periodic checks of the county's main court house in Waukegan and all branch courts countywide. In addition, Comet and Gabes will be available to all law enforcement agencies throughout Lake County.

With the rise in school violence, Del Re sees the team as a valuable resource for schools in Lake County and the surrounding area. Since the team's graduation from the AFT training facility, the Sheriff's Office has already responded to two Chicago area schools in reference to bomb threats.

"Comet will be extremely valuable in an ongoing effort to keep our children and schools safe," commented Del Re.

The EDCT will be on call 24 hours, seven days a week. Gabes said he and Comet are also on call nationwide if the need arises for security reinforcement on a larger scale. They are already scheduled to assist with security at the Winter Olympics to be held in Salt Lake City, Utah later this year.

Comet lives with Gabes and Solo, a patrol German shepherd for the Sheriff's Office. Comet is in continuous training eight hours per day, Monday through Friday and four hours per day on the weekends. She will follow that schedule for the rest of her detective career which Gabes estimated to be about eight years.

"This doesn't make for a great social life," quipped Gabes.

However, Comet's ability to sniff out a planted firearm on a media member during the press conference spoke largely of her successful training and her immense value to the Sheriff's Office.

Career Clipboard Notes

What Are My Skills Worth?

Whether you are looking for a new job or just want to maximize your value in your current job, you may want to identify what your skills are worth. But where can you go to find the value of your skills? This can be a difficult question since most of us have many skills, and can do various jobs.

Skill Identification

As you may have guessed, the first step in the process is to identify all of the skills that you have. Even if you have already decided that you are going to work in a given field, it is a good idea to identify all of your skills. A lawyer who worked his way through law school as a security guard, understands basic security techniques that could be an advantage in the law practice. A carpenter who has done some electrical work at home is more valuable because of the electrical knowledge, etc.

The most common mistake people make in this area, is to leave what are called "soft skills" off of the list. These are skills that support your work but are not necessarily required for your job. There are many recruiters and managers who believe that the soft skills are even more important than the primary skills.

Soft skills can include:

- Written communications
- Oral communications
- Listening skills
- Negotiating skills
- Building relationships
- Familiarity with common software
- Entrepreneurial experience
- Management experience

Although all of these can be soft skills, written communications is not a soft skill for someone who is hired to write for the company newspaper. Management experience is not a soft skill for someone in a management position. However, someone with management experience who is in a non-management position is more valuable because he or she can empathize with the manager.

When listing the skills, also list: a proficiency level (I use a 1-10 scale) how many years of experience you have had with that skill, and the last time the skill was used. This is not as easy for the soft skills, but is very useful in later steps. For example, if you have negotiating as a skill and you bought a car six months that may be the last time the skill was used. Next week we will look at the final steps in the skill valuation process.

How To Survive The Job Search
By Nancy Sakol

Dear Search,
Q: I have read your column for quite a few years and have picked up quite a few tips along the way. Although I spent 9 years with the same employer, I have been recently involved in a corporate downsizing that will leave myself and 4 others without jobs at the end of June. I haven't had to look for a job in a very long time and don't know where to begin. I work in the customer service department which involves the operation of a computer for entering data, but a friend of mine who is a total computer whiz suggested that entering data is not enough to help me get another job at the same salary range. In order for me to stay at the same pay level I am at, she said, that I must have stronger computer skills like for spreadsheets and word processing. I am hoping that you can give me a suggestion as to what I should learn, and where I should go to learn it, in order to stay on top of what I should learn, and where I should go to learn it, in order to stay on top of what corporations are looking for. Please respond as time is running out. R. G. - Lake Villa
Dear Search,
A: Corporate downsizing most often sneaks up and leaves many people faced with the same dilemma and questions regarding their need to update their skills. This is most often an issue when an individual has been in the same position with a company for a long period of time. The main concern for you may be the ability to, at minimum, stay at the same pay level you have been accustomed to. Without knowing what your current salary is at, it is important to keep in mind that there is always the possibility that after staying in a position for so many years, that your salary may be over market for what it is you do. Quite often I see corporations applauding the work of their employees with annual raises, merit increases, incentives and bonuses, that the recipients of these, until faced with the situation of having to seek other employment, do not realize, that while they had a good thing going, things are not necessarily the same all over. What should you do now... First, face reality and decide monetarily, what it is you are willing to truly settle for in order to get out there and prove yourself to a new employer. Get your resume together. I would also suggest that you choose an employment service such as Superior Personnel. We can provide you the opportunity to meet with select corporations that we feel would be a match for you with the strong stability and knowledge you have in your field. Employers love stability. You will find that keeping a good attitude will be a healthy thing that will shine through at any interview. When it comes to learning more current software, I can tell you that Microsoft for word processing and Excel for spreadsheets are the biggies. If you are interested in programs available for you to learn give me a call. It is just a suggestion, but your friend who is offering you her advice, may be able to also offer you her knowledge of software. Either way, a couple of hours spent with each software and you could be in full swing. Good Luck.
